Pickup plunged off levee into Salt Creek.

Man dies in pickup crash

One man was killed and another injured Wednesday when a pickup truck swerved off a gravel road atop the Salt Creek levee and rolled 85 feet down the embankment into the water.

The driver of the truck, Wayne E. Behrens, 29, of 6933 Cleveland, was dead on arrival at Bryan Hospital from chest injuries. Gary R. Young, 25, of Cortland, a passenger, was reported in fair condition at St. Elizabeth Health Center.

Police said Young got out of the truck after the crash and summoned help, but Behrans had to be removed from the cab by a rescue team.

The accident occurred on the levee road between Sunvalley Blvd. and 6th St. from Charleston and O Sts. The road belongs to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, which built the levee, and both ends of it are blocked, but police said traffic on the road is not uncommon.

The cause of the accident was undetermined.

January execution date fixed in Simants case

By Jim Camden
Star Staff Writer

The execution date for convicted mass murderer Erwin Charles Simants was set by the Nebraska Supreme Court Wednesday.

Simants, whose case was turned down by the U.S. Supreme Court for review on Oct. 3, was sentenced to die in the electric chair on Jan. 21, 1978.

Simants' attorney, Keith Bystrom, said, however, that he doubted Simants would be executed on that date.

Bystrom said he would file a request for a rehearing of the case before the U.S. Supreme Court this month. Acknowledging that chances for that action to win a reprieve are slim, Bystrom said he had several other options that could stop the execution.

The Lincoln County District Court, which originally sentenced Simants for the slaying of six members of the Henry Kellie family, could be asked for post conviction relief, Bystrom said. If that fails, an appeal would be taken to the state Supreme Court.

Simants could also file a habeas corpus request with the U.S. District Court, and appeal a refusal to the 8th Circuit Court of Appeals. Finally, the state Board of Pardons could be asked to commute the sentence.

Bystrom said he remained confident Simants would not be executed, despite the setting of an execution date.

"We've had dates set before," he said.

The state Supreme Court originally sentenced Simants to die this July 1, but granted a stay of execution pending the appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Another way that Simants could avoid the electric chair would be for the Legislature to abolish capital punishment.

Omaha Sen. Ernest Chambers, who sponsored a bill to eliminate the death penalty during the last session, said he would introduce similar legislation during the next session "as soon as I can." The Legislature reconvenes in January.

He said the execution date being set the same month that the Legislature convenes puts an additional strain on his efforts to abolish capital punishment.

Stan Krieger, attorney for two other Nebraskans who have been condemned for murder, said the setting of an execution date for Simants didn't help but was expected.

Appeals for Richard Holtan and John Rust are still pending before the U.S. Supreme Court, but are similar to the Simants appeal. Krieger acknowledged that the pending appeals have little chance since Simants' peition was denied.

"I don't think Simants will be executed on Jan. 21," Krieger said, noting the various avenues of appeal.

Simants was convicted of killing Henry Kellie, 66; his wife, Marie, 57, their son, David, 32; David's two children, Daniel, 5 and Deanne, 6; and Henry Kellie's granddaughter, Florence, 10.

U.S.-Soviet action urged

(c) New York Times

Beirut, Lebanon — The military chief to the Palestine Liberation Organization declared Wednesday that the United States and the Soviet Union must find "an integrated solution" to the Middle East problem and enforce it on both sides, or the present explosive situation would last for decades.

"We cannot solve the problem by peaceful means nor by military means," Zuheir Moshin, who heads the PLO's military department, acknowledged in an interview here. He expressed the growing Arab feeling that a stalemate has been reached on the Arab-Israeli problem and that the only hope for peace would be a solution imposed by the two superpowers.

Moshin, one of the most influential men in the PLO, dismissed the new U.S.-Israeli procedural plan for reconvening the Geneva conference as "expressing the Israeli view and not a neutral attitude."

The Israeli government unanimously endorsed Tuesday the working paper which was drafted last week in New York by Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan. Now Washington is waiting for the reactions of the Egyptian, Syrian and Jordanian governments.

Syria will not accept the proposals, says Moshin, who also heads the Syrian-backed Palestinian group Al Saiqa, and who just returned from Damascus. He said Syrian Foreign Minister Abdelhalim Khaddan had given him reassurances that the PLO must be represented at Geneva and had criticized some minor PLO representatives for having shown "too much flexibility."

The Palestinian leader expressed the opinion that Egypt might accept the working paper and that Jordan would like to accept it but probably would give an ambiguous response.

But Jordan and even Egypt could not go to Geneva without Syria, and even if they did go, they would do nothing," Moshin asserted. He noted that Syria had not attended the first Geneva conference in 1973 which, he added, lasted only a few days and accomplished nothing.

Moshin emphasized that he was not optimistic about the possibility of reconvening Geneva in the coming four to six months "because nothing has changed in the balance of forces."

On the political plane, he said there was a development in the U.S. position "in form but not in substance."

"Kissinger used to talk about Palestinian interests and Carter talks about Palestinian rights" he said. "But both administrations do not recognized full Palestinian sovereignty."

The recent U.S.-Soviet communique was "a step forward," Moshin conceded, in that the United States recognized the Soviet presence in the Middle East and the existence of the Palestinians not only as refugees but as "an essential side in the confrontation."

"But the U.S.-Soviet communique did not give a new plan for a solution, or set a time to reconvene Geneva, or solve other procedural problems such as the representation of the Palestinians, the way the conference will work or the essential items on the agenda," the Al Saira leader said.

He stressed that a real political solution would require a new United Nations Security Council resolution, one that went beyond the American-Soviet statement, and included the definition of Palestinian rights to self-determination and an independent state.

The Palestinian military chief showed no enthusiasm for a military alternative to peace talks.

Moshin blamed President Anwar el-Sadat of Egypt for what he called "the weakness in the Arab position." He accused Sadat of leading "an Arab retreat" on the military level. Specifically, he charged that the Egyptian leader had destroyed Arab solidarity, "at least with Syria," and had destroyed his country's relations with the Soviet Union, "the only supplier of arms to the Arabs while the United States multiplied arms assistance to Israel."

Houses trade issue ideas

Washington (UPI) — The House and the Senate exchanged proposals Wednesday on the issue of federal funding of abortions — a dispute which threatens to hold up pay for thousands of government workers and benefits for millions of needy persons.

They came to no agreement. The Senate then proposed that the two legislative bodies not try to settle the emotional abortion issue now but instead pass a simple resolution continuing the pay and programs of the Departments of Labor and of Health, Education and Welfare and several smaller agencies for the rest of this month.

The Senate's proposal would continue in effect during that period the existing law which bars federal funds for abortions except to save the life of the mother.

The House is expected to reply to that proposal Thursday.

The House's position has been that the federal government should not pay for abortions for poor women through the Medicaid program except when the life of the mother otherwise would be endangered.

The Senate's position has been that abortion funds should be allowed in cases of rape, incest and when a doctor says an abortion is "medically necessary."

Wednesday, by a vote of 263 to 142, the House decided to allow funds for "medical procedures" for the "prompt" treatment of some victims of "forced" rape and incest. Rep. John Cavanaugh, D-Neb., voted against the decision, and Reps. Charles Thone and Virginia Smith, both R-Neb., voted for it.

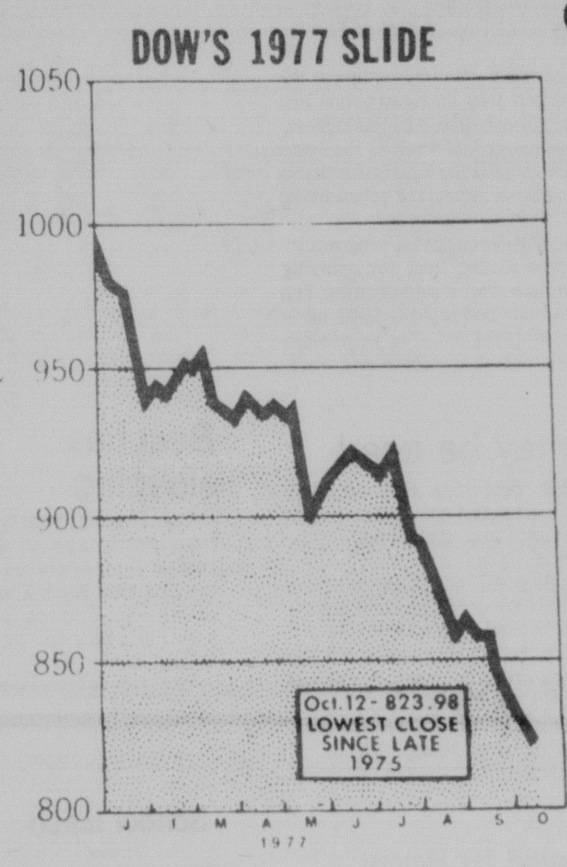
The procedures could, under the House langugage, be used only "before the fact of pregnancy is established."

The rape or incest would have to be "reported to a law enforcement agency."

The House proposal also would allow use of "drugs or devices to prevent implantation of the fertilized ovum" and medical procedures to terminate an "ecoptic" pregnancy, outside the womb.

The Senate then offered, by voice vote, a counter-proposal, allowing abortion funds "if the woman or fetus would suffer serious health damage."

Sen. Jesse Helms, D-N.C., objected to the Senate counteroffer, saying his conscience would not permit the "deliberate termination of human life." But he allowed it to go to the House without formal debate or vote on the understanding he would have an opportunity to challenge it later.



Dow slides midst gloom

Amidst Wall Street gloom over rising interest rates, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks slid 8.40 points Wednesday to close at 823.98, the lowest for the market bellwether since Dec. 8, 1975. The Dow has dropped about 17% so far this year (for more details, see Page 28).

Pupils in high finance

Bellevue, Wash. (AP) — Bank manager Wally Adams sat the 35 third-graders around his conference table and told them yes, he would approve their $100 loan so they could go into the pumpkin business.

But they have to repay it by Nov. 1 — with 82 cents interest.

With Adams' go-ahead, Lois Richards, loan officer at the Bellevue branch of the Seattle-First National Bank, processed the application Tuesday. It didn't matter that none of the applicants could say how much they plan to pay for the pumpkins or how much they'll charge when they sell them to their classmates at St. Louise School.

As head of the class foray into high finance, pupil Jason Mattingly signed on the dotted line. So did teacher Sheri Andrews, to make it legal.

Pupil Siobain Guichon said he knew the class had done a lot better at the bank than it would have accepting a loan offer from a St. Louise teacher.

"She said we had to pay $50 'rent,' " he said.

"And we had to pay it back by Saturday," added another pupil.

What will happen if the money isn't there when the loan comes due?

"We'll just write a check," one youngster said.

"If we only make like $80, we'd have to, uh, babysit," said Michael Osterhought.

"If you can't pay it back, they take things you have," worried another little fellow. "Your house, your car, your bike . . . ."

One little girl said the venture looked like a sure thing "on account of Halloween."

Banker Adams didn't seem worried about the possibility of a default. He said it was often good financial practice to borrow money to pay for an inventory.

Lincoln, Ravenna All-American finalists

By Gordon Winters
Star Staff Writer

Nebraska has a chance to garner an All-American award in something other than college football.

Both Lincoln and Ravenna are among 22 finalists in the All-America City Citizen Action Award program sponsored by the National Municipal League.

The aim of the program is to honor real-life examples of success in dealing with crises faced by cities, such as racial tension, economic decline and citizen apathy, rather than honoring picture-perfect communities, according to program officials.

Lincoln officials are emphasizing the city's efforts in revitalizing downtown, preserving neighborhoods and drafting a new Comprehensive Plan for future development.

Ravenna (pop. 1,450), located in east-central Nebraska, is stressing its efforts in recruiting doctors and establishing of programs for environmental protection and social services.

The 22 finalists were chosen from 470 applicants by league staff members and a screening committee of civic activists and public affairs specialists.

For the next step in the contest a team of three Lincolnites is planning to travel to Denver for a personal presentation to a jury of leaders in private and public life from across the nation. The jury is headed by Dr. George Gallup.

Mayor Helen Boosalis said the members of the team have not been selected, but that it probably will include a member of the Downtown Advisory Committee, a member of the Goals and Policies Committee and either herself or George Chick, director of the Department of Urban Development.

The winners will be announced next spring after league staff members verify the stories with actual visits.

The other 20 finalists are: Anniston, Ala.; Arvada, Colo.; Burbank, Calif.; Chambersburg, Pa.; Charleston, Colo.; Cleveland Heights, Ohio; Dayton, Ohio; Dennis, Mass.; Duluth, Minn.; Lansing, Mich.; Madison, Wis.; Mankato, Minn.; Oklahoma City, Okla.; Ottumwa, Iowa; Santa Cruz, Calif.; Saugatuck-Douglas-Saugatuck, Mich.; Springfield, Mass.; University City, Mo.; Wilmington, N.C.; and Xenia, Ohio.

School stuck with lock bill

Bonn, West Germany (AP) — Students at a high school got an unexpected holiday when they arrived for classes but found the school doors glued shut.

Pranksters had squirted a special industrial glue into locks of the building's 15 exterior doors and 106 classrooms and offices early Tuesday, rendering keys useless, police said.

The 750 students were sent home for the day while workmen installed new locks costing $6,500.

Safety device plan is killed

Washington (AP) — Congress Wednesday sustained a controversial Transportation Department decision to require air bags or other passive safety devices to be installed in all new cars by the 1984 model year.

The Senate voted 65 to 31 to table a resolution disapproving the decision by Secretary of Transportation Brock Adams. The House Commerce Committee earlier prevented the issue from being raised before the full House by voting 16 to 14 to table a similar motion. Edward Zorinsky, and Carl Curtis, R-Neb., voted against tabling the resolution.

Washington — President Carter, in deciding to delay for some weeks more his already overdue tax package, is risking broad-gauge tax reform next year. Informed administration and congressional sources reported that Energy Secretary James Schlesinger and Senate leaders have persuaded Carter to accept a delay on the tax plan lest its publication lead to untoward consequences for the energy bill, especially energy taxes.

Government argues blindness to race is blindness to reality

Washington (UPI) — Allan Bakke's lawyer told the Supreme Court Wednesday that race "is an impossible basis" for admissions to professional schools. The government countered that to be blind to race "is to be blind to reality."

And the lawyer for the University of California, which twice denied Bakke admission to its medical school at Davis, rejected the notion that "Reverse discrimination" was inflicted on the 36-year-old white applicant.

For nearly two hours, the nine justics heard arguments in the closely watched case in which they are being asked to make one of the most momentous decisions on civil rights since "separate but equal" public schools were struck down in 1954.

They heard in turn from Archibald Cox, the former solicitor general and Watergate prosecutor representing the university; Wade McCree, the current solicitor general arguing for the government, and Reynold Colvin, Bakke's lawyer from San Francisco.

The justices, who may decide the case by written opinion later this term, listened attentively and interrupted frequently with questions in the chamber jammed with spectators.

Colvin argued that race is "an impossible basis on which to judge people" and that "ability is not measured by skin pigmentation."

But McCree, a black and a former federal judge, said discrimination still exists 23 years after the milestone school desegregation decision, and that "to be blind to race today is to be blind to reality."

Thurgood Marshall, the court's only black member, interrupted Colvin at one point to say: "You're arguing about keeping somebody out and the other side is arguing about getting somebody in.

"So it depends how you look at it, doesn't it?"

Bakke claimed he was discriminated against because 16% of the openings for each entering class at the medical school were reserved for disadvantage minorities under a special admission program.

But Cox told the court "there is no racially blind method of selection which will enroll more than a trickle" of minority students.

Cox urged the justices to reverse the California Supreme Court, which declared the admissions program unconstitutional because it classified applicants on the basis of race.

"For generations, racial discrimination in the United States . . . isolated certain minorities and condemned them to inferior education," said Cox, standing ramrod straight before the curved bench.

Now, he said, schools want voluntarily to increase the number of minority doctors and set models for the next generation of blacks, Mexican-Americans and other minorities to overcome past discrimination.

McCree followed up with the argument that many Americans born in 1954 when the Supreme Court decided Brown vs. Board of Education still are "knocking on the doors of professional schools" today seeking to fulfill that promise of equal opportunity.

"We are her asking the court to give us the full dimensions of the 14th Amendment," which provides equal protection of law for all persons, McCree said.

It should provide "not only equality of treatment but help persons who were held back to be brought up to the starting line where the opportunity to compete will be meaningful," he said.

While the case was argued, the central figure went to work as usual at a space laboratory near San Francisco, where he is an engineer. Colvin explained that he is a "private person" not interested in the publicity he has generated.

In his argument, the stocky lawyer stressed his client's personal stake in the case, saying: "Allan Bakke's position is that he has a right not to be discriminated against by reason of his race and that's what brings Allan Bakke to this court."

"The ultimate fact in this case, no matter how you turn it, is that Mr. Bakke was deprived of an opportunity to attend the school by reason of his race," said Colvin.

Marshall inquired: "Your client did compete for the 84 seats and he lost? Would your argument be the same if only one seat was reserved?"

Colvin said the issue did not turn on numbers but on the use of race as a factor.

"We do not believe that intelligence, achievement, ability are measured by skin pigment or the last name or surname," he said.

At one point, cox was asked if the university was imposing a "quota" on whites by setting aside the openings for minorities, and replied that while that might be true, it did not amount to "pointing a finger . . . it was not stigmatizing in the way the old quota against Jews was stigmatizing."

"The facts here have none of the aspects that lead us to think of quotas as a bad word," Cox said. "It doesn't say you are inferior. It isn't forced."

New law promises ravaged cities billions

Washington (AP) — The Carter administration's first new urban program was signed into law on Wednesday, promising billions for ravaged American cities and their poor and out of work residents.

The $14.7-billion housing bill includes an expansion of the Community Development program, with an emphasis on older cities, as well as more money for housing programs and rent subsidies for poor families.

The rent subsidies plus added financial aid to hard-pressed cities will help an additional 345,000 families find housing at rents they can afford, according to the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

At the same time, administration officials estimate the measure will provide a half million jobs in construction and related industries where unemployment rates are the highest.

On the heels of his eye-opening tour last week of the South Bronx, President Carter said as he signed the legislation that it will provide "a giant step forward" in improving urban living conditions.

New elements in the community development program include a $400-million Urban Action Grant fund for spurring economic development in the nation's most troubled cities. The bill includes a formula that drastically increases federal aid to cities in the Northeast and the Midwest but also provides a trickle more money for growing cities of the South and West.

Taft-Hartley Act may be used

Washington (UPI) — Labor Secretary Ray Marshall warned Wednesday he will obtain an emergency back-to-work order against striking East and Gulf Coast dockworkers if the impact of the walkout continues to spread.

Marshall said the administration will not "rush in" for a Taft-Hartley injunction, but officials are concerned because the stalemate has halted grain exports through New Orleans.

The Taft-Hartley Act permits the government to ask the courts for an 80-day back-to-work order in cases of national emergency. It is seldom used, having been sought only 34 times since the passage of the act 30 years ago and granted 29 times, the last during a longshoremen's strike in October 1971.

The current administration's policy is against intervention in labor disputes.

Ethics reform bill defeated by House

Washington (UPI) — The House killed a congressional ethics reform Bill Wednesday, apparently angered by embarrassing disclosures brought to light by an earlier reform and soured at the prospect of further policing.

The surprise move, a personal defeat for Speaker Thomas O'Neill, followed Tuesday's disclosure that members had used taxpayer money for such business entertainment expenses, including club dues and an office Christmas party.

Legal services for poor receives OK

Washington (UPI) — The Senate approved a three-year extension of the federal government's program of legal services for the poor Wednesday after voting to lift a ban against the lawyers entering school desegregation cases.

The legislation was approved 77 to 15 only after Senate liberals made sweeping concessions to cut off a threatened filibuster which could have jeopardized any action this year.

Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., voted with the majority, Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., with the minority.

Medicaid abusers to face indictment

Washington (UPI) — A government project to find the worst 500 Medicaid abusers among doctors and druggists was expanded when computers turned up 47,000 suspicious cases, HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. told Congress Wednesday.

Califano said the government decided to investigate the 2,500 most suspicious cases. The number includes 1,400 doctors and 1,100 druggists who submitted health care bills in 1976.

Indictments are expected to begin this fall, he said.

Space shuttle flies superbly

Edwards Air Force Base, Calif. (UPI) — The space shuttle Enterprise, America's hope for future manned spaceflight, performed its fourth free flight so "superbly" Wednesday that enthusiastic NASA officials announced only one more test will be needed.

"The flight today went better than most of us expected," said former astronaut Donald "Deke" Slayton, project manager of the approach and landing tests. "In my opinion it was the most important flight. It was a superb flight and I'm glad to have it behind us."

At a news conference after the 75-ton Enterprise touched down on a dry lake bed on its free fall flight from more than 20,000 feet, Slayton announced that the program has been so successful, the shuttle will make only one more free flight instead of the previously scheduled three.

That flight is scheduled for Oct. 26, and instead of using the vast dry lake landing strip, the Enterprise will glide to a landing for the first time on a regular concrete runway at this desert base.

After the final test, the shuttle will be shipped to NASA's facility at Huntsville, Ala., for vibration tests leading to its first orbital flight scheduled for March 1979.

Allies upset by limits on range

(c) New York Times

Bari, Italy — European nations of the Atlantic Alliance, declaring that cruise missiles were vital to the defense of the continent, expressed anxiety Wednesday to Defense Secretary Harold Brown about the Carter administration's plans to limit the range of the weapons in strategic arms talks with the Soviet Union.

At the same time, Brown and key European defense ministers agreed the so-called neutron bomb had a "military utility and deterrent effect," but public opinion and political questions had, so far, thwarted any decision to deploy the controversial warhead in Europe.

"Political concerns exist, public concerns exist," said Brown, discussing the neutron bomb, at a news conference following the two-day meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's nuclear planning group. The panel, made up of seven nations, is designed to discuss the development and deployment of the tactical nuclear weapons force committed to NATO.

Two themes dominated the meeting in this coastal city in southeast Italy. One was the question of development and deployment of the neutron bomb, or "enhanced radiation warhead," a nuclear weapon designed for use on 75-mile-range Lance missiles. The small, so-called "clean" warhead was created to block a tank assault in Central Europe, kill enemy soldiers in the vehicles, but spare surrounding civilian areas from damage.

A second theme was the Carter administration's plan, in strategic arms talks with the Soviet Union, apparently to limit the range of ground-launched cruise missiles to 360 miles. Cruise missiles are relatively inexpensive, computerized, low-flying drones capable of piercing Soviet air defenses and delivering nuclear weapons.

NATO nations — especially West Germany, Britain and Italy — view the cruise missile as an important defense option, and said at the meeting that limits on the missile place Western Europe at a disadvantage while the Soviet Union strengthens its offensive nuclear forces.

Privately and then publicly, Brown sought to assure the allies the United States was not placing permanent limitations on the weapon. It was unclear, however, if Brown's comments assured the Europeans who say cruise missiles with only 360-mile ranges are an inadequate deterrent.

U.S. sources said limitations on the cruise missile will last only three years, and the ban would therefore be temporary on the missile, which has a range of up to 1,500 miles. European nations fear, however, that once the ban is imposed, it would be difficult after three years to free the cruise missile from the limitation. The Soviet Union has indicated it will not agree to an arms limitation accord unless restrictions are placed on the deployment of cruise missiles.

Amy practices 'Twinkle' instead

First Lady Rosalynn Carter said Tuesday she and 8-year-old daughter, Amy, have been practicing "Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star" on the violin — not "Three Blind Mice" as her press secretary reported last week.

After addressing the United Press International editors conference in Puerto Rico, Mrs. Carter said the violin teacher had received several complaints about her teaching method after the "Three Blind Mice" story appeared.

It seems that the way to teach beginners the violin is with "Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star," Mrs. Carter said.

Alcohol fuel bolstered by bill affecting farms

Washington (AP) — A measure to encourage the use of idled croplands to ease the nation's energy shortage was introduced Wednesday in the Senate.

It would authorize the secretary of agriculture to let farmers use set-aside acreage for the production of any agricultural or forestry product to be used or sold for use in the manufacture of alcohol fuel.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., said "alcohol fuels derived from the products of our nation's farms and forests and by reclamation of wastes are the most apparent and exploitable renewable energy resource available today."

He was joined in introducing the bill by Sens. Robert Dole, R-Kan., Carl Curtis, R-Neb., and James Abourezk, D-S.D.

Curtis said a news conference will be held Thursday on the steps of the House of Representatives to explain and demonstrate an automotive fuel mix of gasoline and alcohol produced from surplus agricultural crops.

Woman Air Force navigator graduates at top of her class

Washington (UPI) — One of the first six women to complete flight navigator training is being graduated at the top of her class, the Air Force announced Wednesday.

First Lt. Mary K. Higgins of Hometown, Ill., earned the highest grades in flying and academic subjects in the class of 18 men and women to receive navigator wings at Mather Air Force Base, Calif., Wednesday, the Air Force said.

Lt. Higgins will be assigned duty aboard KC135 aerial tankers. Other women graduates also will serve on the tankers, transport planes or weather reconnaissance aircraft.

GE gains income hike

New York (AP) — General Electric Co. said third quarter net income rose $41 million from a year ago to $268.5 million, or $1.18 per share, from $227.3 million, or $1.01 per share.

Sales totaled $4.35 billion, compared with $3.77 billion in 1976.

Bike thieves end dream of dying boy

Des Moines (UPI) — The dream of a 12-year-old youth suffering from a rare form of leukemia has been shattered by thieves.

Shawn Clos, 12, of Des Moines received a green trail bike from his parents last year. This week it was stolen from the porch of his family's home.

"Now, we have a short time to make his dreams come true," said Bonnie Johnson, his mother. She said her son is suffering from a rare form of adult leukemia seldom diagnosed in Iowa.

Last year, Clos also lost his bicycle to thieves.

"Since we came back (to Des Moines) he's lost the two things that meant the most to him," Mrs. Johnson said.

The family had lived in Des Moines previously and moved back here last summer from Mediapolis.

Meyer Lansky's stepson shot dead

Bay Harbor Island, Fla. (AP) — The stepson of underworld figure Meyer Lansky was shot to death Wednesday in what police speculate was a gangland revenge killing.

Richard Schwartz, 47, was shot once as he sat in his car behind a restaurant he owned in this exclusive resort city between Miami and Miami Beach, police said.

Carter condemned for doing just what he promised

Most veteran Washington observers believe President Carter is now in trouble because he has tried to do too much too fast. If that is true, it says more about the people he is in trouble with than it does about the President himself.

There is little doubting that the President is in trouble. For the first time, his job approval rating has slipped below 50% in nationwide sampling. Only in his native south does Carter receive the approval of a majority of people. The President doesn't have much clout in the Congress, either.

It's reported that Nebraska Sen. Ed Zorinsky, for example, has written Carter's congressional liaison man that he is upset with the "incompetence" of the White House staff. Zorinsky also accuses Carter of trying to tackle too many major problems at once.

There seems to be general agreement among his critics that the President's agenda is too crowded. On the domestic scene, proposals on energy, the economy and election, welfare and tax reform have been or soon will be thrown into the congressional hopper. The administration faces the problems of inflation and unemployment, and farmers are girding for battle on account of low commodity prices. In the foreign affairs area, Carter faces tough sledding with regard to the Panama Canal, the Middle East, strategic arms limitation, international trade, relations with allies, relations with Russia and China and relations with the Third World.

His critics say he is foolish to tackle all these problems head-on and that he has become too willing to bend when the slightest pressure is exerted. They say he won't defend his principles and that he cuts the ground from beneath many of his supporters in Congress and elsewhere by reversing positions unexpectedly. And they say he is trying to bypass these political problems by taking a cosmetic and unnecessary trip abroad next month.

We think it is curious that the President is getting into political trouble for tackling the problems at hand, most of which he inherited. He is unexperienced, to be sure, and he and his aides probably can do a better job of preparing proposals and communicating with Congress, allies, the other superpower or anybody or nation with whom he has to do business. Such improvements will come with time.

But there is nothing wrong with setting up a full agenda of problems to solve and getting on the road with it.

He campaigned for and won the presidency as a person who would not practice politics-as-usual in Washington, who would attempt to get things done, shake up the Washington establishment, the bureaucracy and change the status quo.

Now he is being condemned by congressional and media practitioners of politics-as-usual for trying to get things done.

If Carter is failing, it is because the Congress, the media and many of the people in the country are not ready for a change from politics-as-usual. Egos are too great, the old ruts too deep for people to climb out. The special interests are still too powerful and the old school ties too strong. Candor and boldness, openness and unpredictability are not prized among the politics-as-usual set.

We hope the President wins out in the end, although it will be tough for him. It may be stretching the point a bit, but there is a measure of truth in the suggestion that Carter is doing all right, it is his critics who are out of step. Getting everybody in step, however, will take some doing.

Bike path to be re-bid

Delay in construction of the 3.8 mile bike path along Antelope Creek between southeast Lincoln and downtown is not welcome news, but it is understandable. Initially, construction of the bike path was to begin this fall.

Plans must be redrawn and bidding rules loosened to bring the project in at estimate. Only so much money is available now, and initial bids were rejected because they were about $100,000 higher that the estimated $250,000 cost.

Concrete contractors will now be allowed to bid on the project whereas only asphalt contractors bid before. Also the design will be scaled down, according to the city public works department, to eliminate an underground crossing at A St. Construction of the project is now scheduled to begin next spring.

It is hoped that ways can be found to restore the underground crossing feature to the bike path plans.

A bike path which people find easy and safe to use will attract a surprisingly large volume of commuter bike traffic, we'll bet.

If so, it will be well worth the investment, one which might open the way for similar efforts elsewhere in the city.

Bill Morton's magic

'Mr. Magic Man'

Lincoln, Neb.

How well I recall Mr. Bill Morton's magic shows. His mother, Mrs. Rose Morton, took me whenever his show was in town, either in a theater or at the State Fair.

She was a proud mother of her two sons. She and her husband, Dr. Perry Morton, gave many years of their young lives caring for homeless children gathered at Tabitha, he as their dentist, she mothering and sewing for many.

Today, long-widowed, Mrs. Morton passed her 95th birthday on August 20. A gentle lady, she smiles as we speak of her past years of doing. Perry, her son, died years ago.

Bill has a passion for collecting. His newspapers are fascinating, with headlines of great American history, dating from 1789 to the first moon walk in 1969. He also had a unique gun collection, some exact replicas of famous and infamous outlaws. At that time, he had 300 guns.

As a traveling showman through Canada, Mexico and the United States, he has been the recipient of many awards, honors from international magic societies and show business organizations. In over 30 years and with more than 12,000 appearances, he is among the greatest.

In the 1960's when Bill and his wife stood on stage after a show, they would toss bright colored balloons into the audience, mostly excited kids who screamed and grabbed for the balloons.

It is quite common knowledge that some of our high school graduates cannot pass an acceptable reading test. Our young people can pick up an article embellished by such vile language and readily conclude that such is smart, sophisticated, modern English, and some of the disregard for any Christian emphasis in some of our public schools would readily support such a conclusion.

We are very far down the road of irreligious paganism in our beloved America. We who have Christian convictions on these vital issues had better wake up and let ourselves be heard before the ever rising tide of atheism engulfs us all in an awful judgment of a holy God.

Are we zombies?

Lincoln, Neb.

The oil companies seem to be basing much of their claim for sky-high profits on the fact that they earned only 10% on their equity investment and this is not adequate. They have been using the same percentage figure for years and, in my judgment, it is an obsolete reference point. I have found that currently they earn 15% to net worth, as a mean average. Probably 99% of the stockholders had no idea of or interest in this figure when they purchased the stock. They are generally more concerned with past performance, future projection, management and total return.

The ethical drug field has been one of our most prosperous industries. For the past five years they have had a 10% earnings growth annually on an average mean with a standard deviation of 10.27. Whereas, the average mean for the oil industry has been a 20% annual earnings growth with a 11.56 standard deviation. Atlantic Richfield purchased Anaconda. Mobile Oil purchased Montgomery Ward and Container Corporation of America. Gulf Oil is bidding $440 million cash for Kewanee Industries and Union Oil is acquiring Molycorp for $220 million. How much of their additional profits would go to searching for energy and how much would go to acquiring additional corporations?

I guess the question is, do we want to believe the oil companies who seem to be distorting the facts, have a record of fixing prices and making illegal campaign contributions, or do we want to believe presidential energy adviser James R. Schlesinger, a former economics professor, a specialist in strategic studies for the Rand Corporation, and secretary of defense, who has devoted his life to serving and is in fact the people's man? He declares the major oil companies would make more than $120 billion in windfall profits and this is a minimum figure not taking into account inflation. Are we zombies or are we independent thinking human beings?

Carter has communications problem

James Reston

Washington — The Carter administration is now trying to work out a new communications policy for mail, radio, television, newspapers and magazines. It is an ambitious and complicated program, but the President's aides are dealing with it separately, haphazardly and politically, and without any clear philosophy of the general public interest.

For example, the Carter administration, more than any other in the past, has recognized that non-commercial radio and television provides an increasingly important source of information on the news, ideas, and culture of our time, not available elsewhere, that must be financed out of public funds.

In short, Carter and his associates are agreeing that there is a diversity and richness in our society that we need — particularly that our children need — but cannot or will not be provided by large radio and television networks or newspapers that depend on advertising directed to a mass audience.

But at the same time — and this is the puzzle — the Carter administration is insisting on postal rates that are driving all the little newspapers and magazines of ideas to the wall. The specialist periodicals on business, golf, tennis, skiing, sailing, etc., seem to be able to absorb the rising costs of mail, ink, paper, and labor with their mass specialist audiences, but the magazines like The Atlantic, The New Republic, Harpers, with their declining intellectual audiences, and even the general news magazines like Time, Newsweek, and U.S. News and World Report are finding that rising postal rates on top of rising raw materials and labor rates are making it hard to compete with commercial and subsidized radio and television.

There is another aspect of federal communications policy that troubles some congressmen, like Mo Udall of Arizona, but hasn't yet attracted much attention in the White House. What to do about tax policy and death duties that are now encouraging, almost forcing, private newspaper owners to sell out to growing commercial newspaper combines, and therefore concentrating the control of news in the nation?

At the present time, according to Rep. Udall, 170 newspaper syndicates now control 60% of the 1,760 daily newspapers in the United States, and 72% of the total circulation.

Udall is arguing that, if present tax regulations continue, the concentration of communications in America will increase, and that President Carter, if he is really serious about diversifying information, will have to provide tax remedies to small family newspapers and periodicals, as he is proposing federal subsidies for public and educational radio and television.

President Carter has not got all these strands of radio, television, newspaper and magazines together. W. Bowman Cutter, speaking for the President and the Office of Management and Budget, told the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee, that those who utilize postal services — and not the taxpayer — should bear the cost of those services.

Meanwhile, the Carter administration wants to modify the independence of the Postal Service, and put a political appointee back in place of the independently appointed postmaster general, Benjamin F. Bailar of Illinois, who is almost invisible in Washington but has done a remarkably good job.

Since he took over, the postal deficit has been reduced to $400 million this year, from billions under the old patronage system, and cut down the staff of the Post Office by over 75,000. Federal subsidies have dropped from 24% of revenue in 1970 to 9% today; yet there is a powerful lobby in Congress that would increase the level of federal subsidy to the Post Office, eliminate the independent Postal Board of Governors, and alter the present rate-setting process.

For example, a bill has been introduced into the Congress with powerful political support (HR 7700) that would amend the Postal Reorganization Act of 1970 by requiring that the public service appropriation to the Postal Service be increased from the present level of $920 million to a level of 15% of the Postal Service's previous year's operating costs. Or in other words, the more they spent in 1977, the more they would be subsidized in 1978!

This is opposed by the administration as a congressional ripoff, and a return to the political control of the old Jim Farley days. The old Post Office was regarded around here for many years as a political dumping ground that hired political loyalists regardless of ability.

Lawrence F. O'Brien, leaving the Postal Department, described it as being in a race with disaster. Most observers around here agree. When a political promise to reduce employment was made, it was usually the Post Office department that was instructed to do most of the hiring, regardless of need.

As early as 1962, Postmaster General J. Edward Day warned the President and the Congress that if hiring continued at the rate at that time, half the population of the United States would be "slinging mail" by the end of this century.

It is interesting, and may even be significant, that the Carter administration has looked at all these problems of communication, one by one, but never seems to have got them all together. It wants the widest possible discussion of ideas on federally subsidized radio and television, including diverse local programs, but tolerates postal rates and tax levies that strangle the publication of precisely the small-town and family-owned papers so close to its Georgia experience.

Nobody's to blame for this paradox of contradiction. If Jimmy Carter, Jody Powell and Hodding Carter 3d had thought about a communications policy seriously, they would undoubtedly come out with something that made sense. But there's a problem in Washington now. It is not that the Carter folk are separated from their critics — that was inevitable — but that they are divided on the problem of communications, because they are not communicating with one another.

Now, it's pork roast and apple time

By LaVerna Hassler
Star Feature Writer

Patchwork Prairie Country

With each gust of chill autumn wind, the dry leaves of the cornfields tremble. Rows of corn that stride off to the far horizon in the morning may lie barren by nightfall. Farmers press their hours of labor now, striving to bring in the harvest. But nature's whipsaw moods have not been kind to the farmers this year. Some areas have been devastated by drought, some stricken by hail storms, others damaged by an invasion of corn borers, while some fields have prematurely dropped ears before the harvesting could be completed.

In our area, hail damaged the corn and lowered its resistance, allowing the weeds to take over, followed by disease. It is in these fields that ears are dropping in great numbers. It poses a problem. Too early harvest means the corn is not as dry as it should be which in turn poses an extra expense for the farmer as it must be artificially dried. Yet day by day he sees the ears drop from the stalk and realizes he is losing money by not being in those fields. The price of grain is an added blow. As of now, farming is the only occupation that you can toss a coin for and come up losing . . . heads or tails.

Cinnamon apples and pork roast will be our fare for supper tonight, along with baked potatoes and custard. It is apple season at the farm. I have picked apples and picked apples and still there are apples to pick. I must admit freshly baked apple pie is a choice dessert. We have had several of those along with an apple coffee cake, apple crisp and fried apples.

Today I will make apple butter, tomorrow I will again put some in the freezer and sort and keep the nicer ones for later use.

Even though we have given many of them away, we still seem to be coming up apples. When I stopped in the orchard last spring, I was certain there would be no apples because of the frost. It is impossible to predict the antics of Jack Frost.

Federal Reserve attacked from both sides

By Leonard Silk
New York Times Writer

New York — Has the Federal Reserve been too tight or too loose? Curiously enough, the nation's central bank has been excoriated in recent days by critics on opposite sides. The monetarists, including those in Congress as well as the academic world or business, are blaming the Fed for letting the money supply get out of control, thereby setting the scene for worse inflation. Last week Rep. Parren J. Mitchell, D-Md., chairman of the House subcommittee on domestic monetary policy said, "I fear the Federal Reserve may have again put us on a collision course with disaster."

Mitchell continued:

"Rapid 10% per year growth in the basic money supply over the last half year has created another no-win situation. Cutting it back to get within the Federal Reserve's 4-6½% target range for the year ending next March would require too sharp a deceleration and abort the recovery.

"On the other hand, continuing the present high money growth policy will take us down the garden path to another 1975-76 style inflation and recession."

A majority of business and academic monetarists, led by the so-called Shadow Open Market Committee, favors a sharp cutback in monetary growth as crucial to heading off an acceleration of inflation.

On the opposite side, the Joint Economic Committee of Congress — or at least some of its staff economists who were hard at work while committee members were preoccupied with other matters — put out a report last week attacking the Fed for "systematically" obstructing recovery by keeping money too tight because of its "obsession with inflation."

The report said the Fed's "disastrous" policy was a principal cause of the depths and duration of the 1974-75 recession. It also denounced the upswing in short-term interest rates that the Fed has brought about since summer.

The Fed is taking some comfort from the fact that it is being attacked by both sides.

It sees the attacks as evidence that it must be doing a good job of steering down the middle in the "dilemma case" of simultaneous inflation and unemployment. Yet some Fed officials fear that there may be a grain of truth in both the attacks from the left and the right.

However, they deny the specific charge that the Fed lost control of the money supply last spring and summer. Certainly there were bulges in the rate of monetary growth in April and July — and again in September.

The fed certainly did not, however, deliberately create those bulges. In fact, it has now adopted a semi-monetarist position and seeks steady, moderate growth in the money stock. But it contends that it cannot closely regulate the money supply from month to month — nor can anyone else.

Why did the bulges happen? No one really knows. Henry C. Wallich, a member of the Fed's Board of Governors and a former Yale economics professor, said that "we can explain only part of it." The part Wallich thinks can be explained has to do with seasonal factors and faulty seasonal adjustment of the data. He thinks there may also be "random shocks," or particular forces that, in the short-run, lie beyond the Fed's power to predict and control, or even wholly understand.

"Funny things happen," Wallich said. "When people are afraid of inflation, they may increase their savings rate — and increase the money supply by increasing demand and time deposits. If people have strong feelings of insecurity about the future, they may decide to hold more cash — and again the money supply will go up instead of down."

What John Maynard Keynes called "liquidity preference" — the desire to hold cash rather than illiquid assets — is in the hands of consumers and corporation, not the monetary authorities.

And if people are concerned about the figure, an increase in the money supply may signal not coming inflation but a slump and decline in business investment. This may drag down long-term interest rates, hardly a sign of rising inflationary expectations.

A West German economist, Kurt Richebaecher, chief economic adviser of the Dresdner Bank which has headquarters in Frankfurt, has made this point strongly about his own country. "The vast majority of our theoretical experts with their mechanistic money formula," he said, "are completely unable to grasp the real nature of this progressive process of rising liquidity and falling interest rates."

They fail to grasp it, says Richebaecher, because their uniform approach is based on an expanding economy. "They still do not realize that they should instead be studying the monetary model of contraction, and this is in essence of the model of a collapsing velocity of circulation," he added.

He says the paradox of rising liquidity and falling long-term interest rates cannot be explained by the quantity theory of money and "superficial movements of the money stock." Rather, he thinks the explanation lies not in the "money sphere" but "deep in the capital sphere." The reason money is available in ample or excessive quantities, he says, is that business enterprises in Germany are investing less and less.

"This is the first time in my life," Richebaecher said ironically, "that weak capital spending has been made out to be a meritorious achievement of easy money policy."

The situation in the United States has some similarity to that in West Germany. Short-term interest rates here have been rising — pushed up by the Federal Reserve especially through its control of the federal funds rate on overnight bank loans via open-market purchases or sales of government bills and other securities.

But long-term yields of both government and corporate securities have been flat or declining — a reflection of the "unemployment" of capital, the conterpart of the unemployment of labor and plant and equipment in a sluggish economy.

Industrial capital, in the absence of confidence in the part of business that investment makes sense and will pay an adequate and safe enough return, migrate to government bonds and to bank deposits. This in turn holds down long-term rates.

Paradoxically, the hold-down of long-term rates is a consequence of rising short-term rates, which have helped to stifle business investment and the stock market.

The effort to adhere to rigid monetary rules, targeted on the short-term federal funds rate, has taken its toll of output and employment — and may yet cause a dangerous wave of protectionism internationally.

New laws raise objections to mandatory retirement at 65

Sacramento, Calif. (AP) — After 38 years as master of a small boat harbor on San Francisco Bay, John Mackenhausen lost his city job last May 1 because of a state law requiring him to retire at 67.

But now California is about to become the first state in the Union to abolish mandatory retirement for both public and private employment, and Mackenhausen is once again a harbor master. He is working under a temporary consulting contract until the new law, ending mandatory retirement, becomes effective Jan. 1, and he can be restored officially to the payroll.

"I plan to be here, and I expect to get my old job back," said Mackenhausen. "I have good health, and I'd hate to retire. If I retire, I'm afraid I'd probably just go downhill. I want to keep working, keep active, keep alert."

The California law, signed by the governor last month, gives employers two years to renegotiate union contracts and change pension plans. It goes one step further than a bill approved last month by the U.S. House of Representatives and now before the Senate.

Pushed by organizations representing America's growing senior citizen population — the National Council of Senior Citizens, the Gray Panthers, the National Council on the Aging — it would raise from 65 to 70 the age when employers may require workers to retire, although many pensions will still begin at 65 or earlier for those who wish to retire.

That would be the first national change in the 65-year-old retirement standard since the Social Security system first set that age in 1935.

The California law and the congressional bill, which sailed through the House by a 359-to-4 margin, have suddenly drawn public attention to the major social changes that might result from the injection of thousands of elderly people into the work force. President Carter, while favoring the end of mandatory retirement at 65, has asked that no change be implemented for a year so the impact can be studied.

No one seems to know exactly what might happen. A 1974 Louis Harris survey indicated that one-third of those aged 65-69 would work at least part-time and that would add 2.8 million people to the work force, raising the unemployment rate to nearly 10 per cent, and much more for teen-agers and members of minorities. But the Senate Committee on Human Resources says that only 200,000 people, or two-tenths of one per cent of the labor force, would choose to work beyond 65 and the rest would retire on Social Security and pensions.

A Sears, Roebuck study for the U.S. government concluded that one-third of the 2.04 million people scheduled to retire at 65 in the next five years might wish to work. If one-third worked past 65 at Sears alone, 20,000 job changes wouldn't take place and the company's hiring rate would decline 7 per cent — even more for minorities and women.

A survey of 400 business executives by William M. Mercer, Inc., found 65 per cent favor mandatory retirement at 65. But a Field Research survey of a cross-section of 1,034 Californians of all ages found 87 per cent oppose mandatory retirement, in part because of inflation.

Twelve states besides California have laws pushing back or abolishing the retirement age. But these laws apply either to private or public employment, not to both, as in California. A thirteenth state, Alaska, has a law similar to California's, but a court suit has delayed its effective date indefinitely.

The twelve states are Connecticut, Florida, Hawaii, Illinois, Iowa, Maine, Maryland, Montana, Nevada, New Jersey, New Mexico and South Carolina.

Better health care has increased the percentage of Americans 65 and older to a record 23 million — 10 per cent of the population — and this has fueled what some describe as the new emphasis on human rights for the aged. Inflation is helping to bring older people into the work force by pinching fixed retirement incomes, and a Social Security Administration survey reported that a majority of retired recipients say they are healthy enough to work.

A vice president of a California public utility with mandatory retirement at 65 explained that his company favored mandatory retirement, but he didn't.

"I graduated from high school in 1932, in the Depression, and it took 10 years to work through college. Then World War II. I didn't start my career until I was 33, and I married at 40.

"Now, at 64, I have children 16, 14 and 12. I'm in good health. I don't want to retire, and I can't afford to retire. Personally, I think this law is the greatest thing I've seen in years."

Britton McFetridge, a legislative aide who worked on the California law, estimated that between 5 and 25 per cent of the 50,000 Californians who now retire annually at 65 will continue working, and that would add no more than 12,500 people to a work force of 10.1 million.

McFetridge said he is more inclined to believe the lower figure, and most workers who did not retire at 65 would continue working only two or three more years.

The experience of the federal civil service supports this. Only 1.5 per cent of all civil servants have utilized a program that allows workers to continue after 65.

But employers say those numbers are deceiving because retirements create promotions as well as new jobs. The Sears study concluded that each retirement produces one new job and four promotions.

That domino effect was the main point raised by Leonard Grimes, the only black in California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.'s cabinet. Grimes argued strenuously for Brown to veto the California measures.

"With our concern about the high unemployment among young people, particularly among minorities, how can we take the lid off, let people stay on forever and ever?" Grimes asked. "Most people who have worked 40 years on the job have worked up into some kind of supervisory position. It's not one job for one job. It's a new entry job for an unemployed youth, and it's promotions for minorities and women and others all up the ladder."

But Brown said he viewed the repeal of mandatory retirement as an effort to "liberate human energy to the benefit of all the people.

"I find it hard to understand a society that has a problem with people who want to work. We cannot afford to squander the human talent that presently languishes in the backwaters of our society."

McFetridge says his studies show that 59 per cent of the nation's work force is employed by firms that don't have mandatory retirement plans, "and we can't detect much difference" between those firms and the 41 per cent with mandatory retirment plans. He and others argue that a continuing trend to earlier retirement more than offsets the small number who want to remain on the job after 65.

General Motors, for example, says 89 per cent of its employes now retire before 65. At Dow Chemical, 92 per cent of the retiring employes have quit at 62 since the age for full retirement benefits was reduced from 65 to 62. Nearly half of those remaining on the job after 62 retire at 63 or 64, Jack Jones, a Dow spokesman, said.

"We obviously don't think the repeal of mandatory retirement will have much impact on us," Jones said. "We see no problem with the law."

The U.S. Department of Labor says 82 per cent of the nation's 55-to-64-year-old civilian male work force was employed in 1970. That figure had dropped to 76 per cent by 1975, and will decline to 70 per cent by 1990, a Department of Labor forecast says.

All this suggests a problem.

Demographic studies show that the 16-to-24 age group will decline from 25 per cent today to 21.9 per cent of the work force by 1985 because there will be fewer of these young people (15 per cent of the population). Meanwhile, those 65 and over will rise to 11.7 per cent of the population, but if the mandatory retirement age isn't raised, they'll be only 2.7 per cent of the labor force.

And that means too few productive workers supporting too many retiress, a good way to undermine retirement funds. Now there are 100 employed for every 30 on Social Security. By early next century, the ratio will be 52 retired for 100 at work.

But will senior citizens work in large enough numbers to change this ratio? That might depend on their salaries.

Girls' murder suspect, 16, held

Elvaton, Md. (AP) — The 16-year-old son of a former state labor leader was arrested Wednesday and charged with the knife murders of three young girls whose parka-clad bodies were found in a shallow stream a day after they disappeared while playing near their homes here, police said.

An Anne Arundel County police spokesman identified the youth as Stuart Kreiner, 16, who lived with his parents in the same block of the Southgate housing development 10 miles south of Baltimore as the three girls.

Police said Kreiner was charged with three counts of first-degree murder and is scheduled for arraignment in District Court Thursday, shortly before funerals were held for the three girls — Deborah Ann Hogan, 10; her sister, Theresa, 8, and their friend, Ann Marie Brzeszkiewicz, also 8.

Kreiner is the son of Edward T. Kreiner, who resigned in June after three years as head of the Maryland Classified Employes Association, a labor union of state workers.

No decision has been made whether to charge the youth as an adult or a juvenile, according to Asst. State's Atty. David Cuttler.

At a news conference, Cuttler and police officials refused to discuss a motive for the murders or say whether bail had been set for Kreiner.

They said the break in the case came around 2:30 a.m., with Kreiner arrested at his home 10 hours later. They said a knife, a jacket and unspecified "other items" of evidence were found at his home.

They also said the suspect's family had been extremely cooperative in the investigation.

"This has been a tragedy for everyone," a police spokesman said.

The arrest capped an intense investigation by police into the grisly crime that had stunned this middle-class community of mostly $60,000 homes.

Their bodies were discovered Monday morning in a densely wooded area not far from where they had last been seen playing on Sunday night.

An autopsy showed they had all been stabbed repeatedly in the back and chest with a knife blade about five inches long.

There were also knife cuts on the girls' arms, leading authorities to believe they had tried to shield themselves from their attacker.

"Whoever did this is crazy," said Capt. William Lindsey, a police spokesman, during the investigation.

Natural mistake

Tarnato, Italy (UPI) — Three American sailors trying to take a short cut back to Taranto harbor to rejoin their ship formed a pyramid to climb over what they thought was a 10-foot park wall — and were met by a hail of submachinegune fire.

Police said the Navy men had in fact shinnied up the wall of the local jail.

Guards fired warning bursts from their guns and squad cars — alerted to what was thought to be a breakout attempt — roared to the scene, sirens wailing.

The sheepish sailors explained what had happened and authorities let them go.

Accelerator prompts GM to recall trucks

Detroit (AP) — General Motors Corp. issued a recall order Wednesday for some 330,000 Chevrolet and GMC 1976 and 1977 model light-duty trucks for replacement of the accelerator pedals.

GM said the pedal could catch on the floor covering and "fail to decelerate." The automaker said one minor accident but no injuries were reported as a result of the faulty accelerator.

GM said the accelerator pedal rod could cut through and catch in the floorpan rubber mat or carpet during heavy or repeated full throttle applications, preventing the throttle from returning to idle when the driver's foot is removed.

A spokesman said a new accelerator pedal and retainer designed to prevent the pedal rod from cutting through the floor covering will be installed at no charge.

The problem was disclosed in plant tests, the company added.

Plexiglass separates chamber from area for legally-required witnesses.

Execution area, chair are ready

Associated Press

Nebraska's electric chair is repaired and ready in altered surroundings for the newly scheduled execution of Erwin Charles Simants early next year.

"The old chair hadn't been used since 1959," Correctional Services Director Joseph Vitek said in explaining the need for updating the chair and its chamber at the Penal Complex.

Charles Starkweather, whose conviction for one of a spree of killings in Nebraska and Wyoming led to his execution, was the last man to die in the chair now awaiting Simants' execution date.

"We had the chair checked out and refurbished it from a mechanical and electrical standpoint," Vitek said. "There were repairs that needed to be done."

Vitek said there were some changes in the room where the chair is located and the work was originally targeted for completion by Simants' original execution date last summer, which was stayed for appeal attempts.

"The stay came down before it was finished and we were able to slow down the work," he said, but he added the job was completed during the summer months.

Vitek pegged the cost of the changes, which include some partitioning of the room and installation of plexiglass to separate witnesses from the chair, at approximately $7,000.

Vitek said it was "not a job I relish" and he didn't want the changes viewed as an accomplishment. He did characterize the refurbishing as relieving the "oppressiveness" of the room's atmosphere.

He said it was no longer an "atrocious" chamber, but indicated the changes were designed more to put the chair in working order and to revise the room's layout to provide areas for witnesses and other persons required to be at executions.

Simants was convicted of murder in connection with the slayings of six members of the Henry Kellie family in Sutherland. His new execution date, set on Wednesday, is for Jan. 21, 1978.

Cartoonist's analytic view his own

By Harry Jackson
Star Staff Writer

Analytical cartoonists must do their own thinking or they're just second-rate artists, America's top international political cartoonist said Tuesday.

"The duty of the cartoonist is to know political momentum and turn it into graphics," said Ranan Lurie.

"If he doesn't know what's going on, he's not an opinionmaker, but a court jester," Lurie said.

Lurie was in Lincoln to speak for the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's week-long comedy symposium. He spoke Wednesday night at the Nebraska Union on "The Editorial Cartoon as the Ultimate Editorial."

During an earlier interview, Lurie said the trend nowadays among editorial cartoonists differs from the old days.

"The cartoonist and the editor agreed 100 or 200 years ago that the cartoonist was to draw, not to think," Lurie said. "The cartoonist went to the wise man — editor — and was told what to draw."

But Lurie never accepted that.

Lurie made his reputation with Life magazine in 1968 and then worked for Newsweek after Life magazine folded.

He stayed with Newsweek for several years before joining King Features, a New York distribution service.

Because of the hands-off policy of King Features, Lurie has turned down many lucrative offers from major newspapers.

"All King does is distribute my work. I do all of the thinking," he said. "I maintain my freedom and I don't have to draw cartoons about the local sheriff."

Although the cartooning profession is maturing, Lurie still feels it has a long way to go.

"Right now, the cartoon is really a vassal profession," Lurie said. "It's really an illustration to complement (written) editorials."

But he's confident the professional adolescence is not long for this world.

"Cartooning is like a spaceship. The mediocre cartoon will disappear. The good cartoon will zoom," he said.

And lots of folks are reading Lurie's cartoons. Along with more than 200 major U.S. newspapers carrying his work, he's carried in most free-world countries.

Also, he's been placed by his peers — an organization of 500 political cartoonists in the U.S. — in the top three cartoonists annually since 1970.

Grandparents' claim to boy upheld

Associated Press

A unanimous Nebraska Supreme Court ruled Wednesday that the grandparents of a 6-year-old boy should be granted permanent custody of him even though his mother was never found to be an unfit parent.

The high court upheld a decision by the Hall County District Court in a custody dispute involving young Chad Liebsack.

The grandparents, Emmanuel and Lorrene Liebsack, "as a practical matter, were the acting parents of the child" for some four years, the court noted. The lower court initially granted custody to the father, who lived with the grandparents.

The father, Rickie Liebsack, seldom saw the child, the court said. When the child's mother, Christine Liebsack, remarried years after a divorce, she sought custody and noted she had never been found to be an unfit mother but had simply not requested custody because of finances.

The mother noted a previous Supreme Court ruling which held that custody is to be determined in the child's best interests, "with due regard for the superior rights of a fit, proper and suitable parent."

"The evidence establishes that the grandparents have afforded the child a normal, stable environment and normal associations with other children, and that for all practical purposes they have been the child's parents for the past four years," the court said.

"The trial court's conclusion that in this case the best interests of the child are met by granting custody to the grandparents is supported by the evidence, even after giving due regard to the natural right of custody of a fit parent."

High court confirms Winnebago firings

Associated Press

The Nebraska Supreme Court ruled for the second time Wednesday that the Winnebago School District can fire two teachers. It also told the Thurston County District Court that enforcement of high court decisions is not optional.

The court ruled the school district acted legally in terminating the employment of Carlene Marksbury and Gary Washington. The court noted it had entered a similar decision on Dec. 22, 1976, and had told the district court to dismiss the appeals involving Marksbury and Washington.

Instead, the district court said the board had made a technical error and ordered that the teachers' employment continue.

The unanimous Supreme Court said the earlier case determined the teachers were properly terminated and that the district judge was not permitted "to relitigate the issue."

Warmer trend follows on heels of killing frost

Forecasts for warmer temperatures through the weekend came on the heels of the first killing frost in Lincoln and Omaha early Wednesday morning.

The overnight low in Lincoln was 25, recorded at 8:10 a.m. Wednesay. The temperature reached a low of 29 in Omaha.

North Platte and Sidney shared the state low of 17, while a reported 18 at scottsbluff set a record for the date in that Panhandle community. A high pressure system over Colorado moving to the southeast brought below-freezing temperatures to the entire state except the area adjacent to the Missouri River, according to the National Weather Service.

Omaha school district case is before appeals court again

St. Paul, Minn. (UPI) — A federal appeals judge said Wednesday recent U.S. Supreme Court rulings on Public School integration may be the "first step" toward returning student assignments back to the neighborhood concept.

Judge Donald Ross of Omaha said, however, if that was the Supreme Court's intention it could take "five years for them to admit what they are doing."

Ross commented as the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals spent 100 minutes hearing arguments on the Omaha Public School District's court-ordered integration, now in its second year.

The U.S. Supreme Court remanded the case back to the appeals court, which originally reversed a federal district court ruling and ordered Omaha to integrate it schools.

In returning the case to the appeals court, the Supreme Court said, based on other decisions, the remedy in the Omaha case may have been too severe. The high court said other circumstances than neighborhood composition should be used to provide intentional school segregation.

The appeals court is expected to hand down a ruling within several months. It could dissolve the integration plan, modify it or send it back to the district court for review.

If the case were returned to the district court level, Judge Donald P. Lay of Omaha said the subsequent events could result into a "three ring circus . . . it scares me."

Lay questioned whether the existing record of court testimony would be enough to decide the issue, and Omaha Board of Education attorney Gerald Laughlin said the school district has never had the chance to present all its evidence.

Laughlin said because the issue has never been completely argued it was uncertain if the present forced busing plan was proper.

This is the third time the case has been before the appeals court.

Carter's rating down on most key issues

By Louis Harris

Harris Poll

The sharp drop in President Carter's overall job rating may have been triggered by the Bert Lance episode, but the basic reason behind it is a steady decline in the public's confidence in his ability to handle most of the key issues facing the country.

According to the latest Harris Survey of 1,536 adults nationwide, the President's score on handling the economy and foreign policy continues to fall, while his rating on "restoring confidence in government" has also declined significantly. This last indicator may be somewhat imprecise, but it is highly significant, for it stems directly from the trauma of Watergate. If Jimmy Carter meant anything to the American people last year, he was viewed as someone who could rebuild public faith in our system of government and in our national leaders.

Yet, what appeared to be his strongest asset as recently as July is now under real questioning by the American people, and it seems that a negative momentum is gathering:

— By a bare 47-46%, a narrow plurality gives him positive marks on "restoring confidence in government," compared to a substantial 64-31% majority back in July.

— On "inspiring confidence personally in the White House," Carter emerges with a current 50-42% positive standing, down from 59-34% in July and 74-20% back in April.

In the key issue areas with which the federal government must deal, Carter's ratings are consistently negative:

— On his "handling of the economy," he has sunk to a new Carter low of 66-26% negative from the 54-39% negative score in August.

— On "keeping down the cost of living," the President is rated 76-19% negative, an eight-point drop.

— On "cutting the rate of unemployment," he has a 74-20% negative rating, 12 points lower than before.

Any hope the President might have that he would benefit from a better economy seems to be slipping away. One must point out that Lyndon Johnson, Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford all spent most of their terms with low economic ratings, and Carter seems to be no exception.

On foreign policy matters, however, this President appears to be in even deeper trouble than his immediate predecessors:

— On "handling of foreign policy matters," he is given negative marks of 51-32%, a turnaround from the 43-40% positive standing of July.

— On "handling relations with Russia," he is rated 49-31% negative, down from the 42-38% positive rating of July.

— On "handling relations with China," he receives a 44-31% negative rating, representing a small, but noticeable decline.

— On his efforts to "achieve peace in the Middle East," Carter now stands at 47-34% negative, whereas in July he was 53-35% positive.

— On his proposed Panama Canal treaty, now stalled before the U.S. Senate, Americans give Carter a 58-23% negative rating.

It is clear that Americans have serious reservations about the President on every major aspect of foreign policy. A source of strength for some past presidents, foreign affairs must be viewed as an area of real vulnerability for Carter.

A third major area where the President appears to be in trouble is energy:

— On his "handling of the energy crisis," Carter receives a 58-33% negative rating.

— His "overall energy program" received a negative rating of 57-33%.

Finally, the public feeling about the Lance affair still remains negative:

— On his "handling of the Lance case," the President is given negative marks of 51-34%.

— On his "appointments to high office," he gets a 54-35% negative rating.

A note of encouragement is the finding that the public gives the President good marks for "running an open government." But the current 52-39% positive rating is down from August's 66-28% positive rating, and even more so from the 77-13% positive marks of March, just after he became established in office.

In the last part of September, the Harris Survey asked a cross section:

"Now let me ask you about some specific things President Carter has done. How would you rate him on (read list) — excellent, pretty good, only fair or poor?"

PRESIDENT CARTER'S SPECIFIC JOB RATINGS

	Positive %	Negative %	Not Sure %

Hem rule: Below knee

By Jason Thomas
(c) Chicago Sun-Times

The hemline rule for winter '77 is keep it below the knee.

Although there are both drag-on-the-floor and longer-than-the-floor lengths around, the more-reasonable ankle length is the most important long evening look this season. The hem should start just above a pair of delicate sandals, providing a fabric frame for the silver, gold or mid evening shoes that are big this year.

If there is a single safe length this winter, it will end somewhere in the vicinity of midcalf. It looks good with boots, always covering the boot tops. (Skin showing between skirt and boots gives a woman a "broken-in-the-middle" look.) It looks just as fine with spectators, sandles or shoes and matching hose, for evening or daytime.

Four inches below the knee to one inch below the knee is the safety zone for this look (depending on the length of your leg).

Because of the cost of this year's clothes (investment dressing, it's called), these almost-universally flattering lengths are practical and almost guaranteed to be around for a while.

Beatrice George and Maurine Synk confer.

VISTAs make big difference

When Volunteers in Service to America Maurine Synk, 23, and Robin Dunn, 22, arrived at the Developmental Center for Hispanic Affairs, they found an agency still in its infancy.

Information and statistics on Lincoln's Hispanic population were nearly eight years old — vastly outdated. The center had only one desk, a few supplies and a director.

Both Ms. Synk and Ms. Dunn came to Lincoln to put their Spanish skills to work as well as get the Hispanic program on its feet.

Mrs. Synk studied and spoke Spanish in her native Cincinnati even before high school; Miss Dunn, from Kansas City, has a university degree in Spanish.

The center had been created by the Lincoln Action Program before the volunteers arrived. It was an outgrowth of citizen concern about lack of services for Hispanics — about 3,500 to 4,000 Lincolnites who have Spanish surnames or Latin American ancestry.

The director, Ms. Beatrice George, hired by the Comprehensive Employment Training Agency (CETA), couldn't singlehandedly get the organizational job done.

"The primary goal was to promote awareness that we (Hispanics) do exist," Ms. George said. "People don't even realize there are Hispanics in Lincoln."

Goals for the agency were set high. The center planned to lead the way for cultural, educational, governmental and social service work for the city's Hispanic population.

But it didn't happen. The main reason was money.

Ms. George's CETA-supplied salary was the only funding for the agency. Office space was donated by the Lincoln Action Program... Hired primarily as an administrator, Ms. George spent her time doing legwork: talking to Lincoln school teachers about problems with Hispanic students, helping new families find apartments, getting college students into school, finding emergency help for poor families.

The only cultural sunshine was a singing and dancing group that had few resources to do anything other than practice.

Ms. George, with the agency more than a year, became frustrated, but she didn't quit. At the suggestion of the State Mexican-American Commission, she applied for federal help at the Action office.

The approval process was short, and the VISTAs arrived about the first of September.

"It was the only cultural placement open," Ms. Synk said. "It was a good job offer. It's something that would amount to something. I won't get rich, but that's not how I judge a good job."

"I wanted time to think about what I wanted to do," Ms. Dunn said. "I wanted to use my Spanish so I told them (VISTA officials) I wouldn't take an assignment unless I could.

The duo began the multi-month project of setting up a population schedule which would find out how many Hispanics live in the city, how many work, how many are students, where they live, their income levels, family sizes and so forth.

In the meantime, they've become involved in other community activities. They sing with the center's chorus and dance with the dance group as well as work with the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's student Hispanic group.

They're also making up mailing lists, and writing funding proposals.

"When we get those things done, we can go on to another project," Ms. Dunn said.

And if there's one thing there's no shortage of in the Hispanic center, it's projects. Most of them involve building.

Mrs. George wants to build communication links between the Hispanic center and the schools to promote cultural understanding between students and teachers.

"A Hispanic child going into the educational system won't be understood," Ms. George said. "They'll say he's slow, can't learn. They won't understand that the child comes from a very quiet, humble culture."

She recalled intervening once on a problem involving a teacher and a Hispanic girl who recently moved to Lincoln from Mexico with her family.

"The teacher didn't know the child's mother was very quiet. The mother stayed home, didn't attend meetings, was very traditional the child was the same way.

"The teacher interpreted it as disinterest. That wasn't correct," she continued.

Ms. George worked with the teacher for a short time.

"Now the teacher is letting the child open up at her own pace," she said.

She also wants to open up vocational opportunities and interaction between the center and UNL and Southeast Community College.

Even now, she said, she gets about five inquiries about education possibilities each month.

Another area to open is encouraging low-income persons to use available government facilities such as welfare or food stamps when necessary.

"The people have a hangup about that," Ms. George said. "There's pride that stops them from realizing that's taxpayers' money that they put in when they were working."

But even with the plans, Ms. George feels the VISTAs have been instrumental in getting the ball rolling.

"Those two are a blessing," she said.

VISTA workers help organize social service programs

For the past decade and a half, Lincoln social service agencies have benefited from the work of employes whose checks they haven't had to sign.

The agencies have been the beneficiaries of VISTAs (Volunteers In Service To America) who have permeated all facets of the local social service picture, living on poverty wages paid — by the federal program, on 24-hour call and doing what's normally done by high-priced consultants.

VISTAs are primarily organization specialists who put together self-help programs for underprivileged persons. Trained in Kansas City and coming from coast to coast, their stay is usually one year, although they sometimes will stay an extra year if the feds feel it's necessary.

For about $200 a month in pay and allowances, VISTAs build agencies from the ground up or strengthen an existing program.

"Yes, they're underpaid, but they know that when they start," said Elmer Lange, director of Nebraska's Action office, the federal agency which administers VISTA workers.

They'll help to organize neighborhood groups such as that in the South Salt Creek area.

Or they'll develop programs like the rape crisis center with Open Door Health Center. The federally-paid workers also have strengthened Planned Parenthood, added extra hustle to the Indian Center and saved the Hispanic Center when it was floundering.

And virtually all for free. VISTAs don't cost the city a dime. There is no matching funds, grants or donations that have to be made.

VISTAs are brought to an agency after a short application process, but not as employes.

"The volunteers can't work on one-to-one projects," Lange explained. "They're supposed to be organizers and leaders."

That is one of the two consistencies about VISTAs. The other is they're idealistic. "Our job is to eliminate poverty in America by helping people help themselves," Lange said. "That may never be done, but it's a goal."

Otherwise, VISTAs are as varied as their skills.

They may be male or female, anywhere from 18 to 65 years old, a carpenter or lawyer or newly graduated college student, or someone with an idea someone else liked.

Their skills range from speaking second languages to those of craftsmen who wish to teach their trades.

"We don't care how old they are or anyting else," Lange said. "We put them where they're qualified."

Founded by the Johnson administration, VISTA was the offspring of the Peace Corps. Action administrators now and then call VISTA the domestic Peace Corps.

Peace Corps volunteers are sent to foreign countries; VISTAs are sent to cities.

The theory is that although neighborhood and agency leaders have ideas about what must be done to improve the community's lot, they may not have the expertise or time and manpower to get the job started.

To get on the VISTA wagon, an agency must be nonprofit with a definite plan for the workers to complete or be a neighborhood or community organization with an idea of where it wants to go.

The workers come in one of two ways: A worker may come from the community or close by and be familiar with local problems. The familiarity allows the worker to begin activities immediately without having to learn the local demeanor. For instance, the head of the rape program here is a local product.

If the program needs a specialized volunteer who speaks an ethnic dialect or second language, such as two volunteers with the Hispanic Center, the Action office dips into a national pool. The volunteers there are willing to work in a specialized program which will help develop their particular skills while helping other people.

Normally, a state or city has a quota for VISTAs but abundant funds last year allowed the Action office to bring 70 extra volunteers to Nebraska over the regular 34.

This year the Action office is back on its quota and won't be filling new positions.

But that doesn't trouble VISTA administrators. At one time Lincoln had only 10 workers instead of the current 22, and even those were under fire from conservative elements of the Lincoln City Council.

In late 1976, four of seven councilmen urged Gov. J. James Exon — who has final say on where VISTAs may go in Nebraska — to oppose adding new positions here. They said VISTAs stirred up the city's poor by convincing them to oppose City Council policy.

But three other council members and the mayor were in favor of the additions so the governor approved the placements.

"They're not troublemakers," Lange said. "They're supposed to help organize people to improve their lot in life."

"They're here to help people, not lead marchers," Lange said. "They work in the system."

Don't think you're really fooling customs

Postcard

By Stan Delaplane

Your friendly Uncle Sam: If you cheated on your customs declaration last time you came home, you should be ashamed. Chances are the inspector caught it. But, since you only cut the actual price $10, he passed it rather than hassle.

A customs inspector told me: "About 90% of the tourists bring back items we see every day. Nine out of 10 people put down the honest price. So when Number 10 comes in, marking a $100 watch at $50, it jumps right out at me."

☆ ☆ ☆

"Lots of small tourist shops tell the customer: 'Look, I'll give you a receipt showing you paid only half the amount.' So he shows me a receipt of $50 for a quartz Seiko watch.

"We see half a dozen of those watches every day. And I know the best price you can get on them is $100."

☆ ☆ ☆

When it's mango time in Hawaii: Great temptation to slip a couple of these delicious fruits under your shirts. But — bags going from the islands to the mainland, are inspected by the Department of Agriculture. "Any fruits, nuts or vegetables?"

☆ ☆ ☆

After you say, "No," he opens the bag. It's not a big search. But the delicious perfume of the mango has a peculiar quality. Confined in a bag, it intensifies. When that bag is opened, the airport smells as though you'd dumped a truck load of mangos.

☆ ☆ ☆

Weak excuse: "How did that happen? My maid must have put it in there for a present." The inspector sighs. (They've heard all the jokes so save your breath.) Picks up the mango. Drops it in the discard box. "Next, please."

☆ ☆ ☆

Coming off a ship from Mexico, I gave the customs inspector my declaration. Right to the penny. "Honest John." Inspector closed the bag. As I picked it up, he said innocently: "Do you have the time? I left my watch at home this morning."

☆ ☆ ☆

I don't wear a wrist watch in the tropics. (You perspire under the band.) I'm sure he noticed my bare wrist. Figured I had a nice, new smuggled watch in my foxy pocket.

I carry a small pocket alarm watch in my breast pocket. I took it out. Five years old. Worn looking. "It's exactly 9:25," I said. "Thanks," he said. "Have a nice day."

☆ ☆ ☆

Hot spots with sharp customs men: Honolulu where we return from the Orient. Chinese and East Indian merchants at Hong Kong and Singapore plead with you to accept a receipt for half the amount you really paid.

☆ ☆ ☆

Any entry point from Colombia. The route of the "mules". The carriers of cocaine. Smuggling chains often persuade some under-30s they can pay for their vacations by carrying in a few ounces.

☆ ☆ ☆

Entry points from Jamaica. Jamaican ganja (marijuana) is superior stuff. Kids coming back often bring in a few lids for friends. And often get busted. (Smuggling narcotics is not like parking next to a fire plug. They put you in stony-lonesome until you are good and sorry.)

Greek Customs goes over you thoroughly coming in and going out. Spanish Customs men have the stern look of cops on the burglary detail. (But maybe they're just being formal.)

☆ ☆ ☆

France — Vive la France! — has two exits from baggage claim. "Something to declare." "Nothing to declare." Go out the "Nothing" door whistling "La Marseillaise."

☆ ☆ ☆

You are allowed $100 worth duty-free coming back to the U.S. (From the Virgin Islands, Guam and Samoa, $200.) I came home with about $500. A busy U.S. Customs man spent 15 minutes working out costs so I paid the lowest possible duty. (Those are the times when I feel my income taxes are paying good people.)

☆ ☆ ☆

Surprising, but the duty you pay on amounts over $100 are never a whole lot. Write everything down. You'll see.

Wave nearly disaster in dinghy

Boston (AP) — Enda O'Coinnin, an Irishman who almost three months ago set sail in a rubber dinghy across the Atlantic Ocean, recalls the freak wave that washed his voyage into near disaster.

"There was a gale with waves up to 30 feet high," says the 21-year-old student who sailed from Marblehead on July 17 with hopes of reaching Ireland.

"A freak wave suddenly flipped me over . . ." he said. "I had to hang on and hope for the best."

O'Coinnin's 17-foot inflatable craft, which was rigged with a sail and an emergency radio, was 400 miles off the Irish coast when the seas crushed the journey. He had been at sea for more than two months and had traveled 2,500 miles from America.

"By the second night after the dinghy had capsized and I'd been in the water for many hours, I was weak and suffering from exposure and hunger. I managed to switch on the emergency radio beacon . . . At this stage, I didn't think I would survive."

O'Coinnin, who told his story to an interviewer for the Boston Herald American, survived his four days awash by eating raisins and drinking a small amount of fresh water he saved when he capsized.

He said a passing airliner picked up his radio signal, and a search located his drifting craft. After being pulled from the water, he was treated for exposure but was otherwise uninjured.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠
Pass	2 ♠	Pass	4 ♠

Opening lead - king of diamonds.

The finesse is a marvelous instrument of play, but there is no question that it is used far more than is necessary. Consider this deal where West cashes two diamonds and shifts to a trump. Declarer draws trumps and takes a club finesse followed later by a heart finesse, or a heart finesse followed later by a club finesse. Either way, he goes down one.

However, South should make the contract, and it is not really hard to figure out the proper method of play. The clue comes from the fact that West passed as dealer and showed up with the A-K of diamonds of his first two plays.

For practical purposes it must be assumed that West cannot also have the king of hearts and king of clubs, because he surely would have opened the bidding had he held both of them. He might have passed with one of them, but not with both.

Since East thus becomes marked with either one or both of the missing kings, it follows that the contract can be assured by simply leading a low club from dummy after drawing trumps! If East has the club king (the actual case), there is nothing he can do to stop declarer from making the contract. If he goes up with the king, South later discards two hearts on dummy's A-J of clubs; if East does not rise with the king he never gets a club trick.

Declarer also makes the contract if West has the king of clubs. In that case South loses his queen of clubs to West's king, but he is then able to discard one of his heart losers on dummy's jack of clubs and dispose of his other heart loser by taking a finesse against the king of hearts which East is now marked with by the bidding.

Here are rules for grandparents

Life Begins At Forty

By Joanne Farris

DEAR JOANNE FARRIS: I never had a living grandparent, even when I was a little girl. Now my son has two children, a boy of 3 and a girl who's just about to be 1 year old.

I love them both very much, but I find myself asking myself "What is a grandmother supposed to be?" How far dare I go in showing love or in disciplining? Will my son be angry if I spoil his children with affection? With gifts?

Will you put something in your column to give me and others a few guidelines? Signed: A concerned middle-aged grandparent.

ANSWER: More people are living longer nowadays, so more of us will have the opportunity to be grandparents, and more of today's youngsters will have a chance to know their grandparents well. This will be good for all of us.

What is a grandmother (or grandfather) supposed to be? Not necessarily what you wish your grandmother might have been, if you had had one. Not necessarily what a child thinks his dream grandparent would be.

Be what you feel like being, be natural, be yourself. Your lifestyle will indicate what a natural grandparent-grandchild relationship is for you and help you figure out what you want to share of yourself with your son's children.

Can you go wrong showing love? I don't think so, unless you shower affection on one child and withhold it from the other one. A wise grandparent shows love to each grandchild.

What will you do about disciplining? Do you need to discipline your grandchildren? Perhaps your son and his wife will be even-handed about handling this responsibility when they're with you as well as when they are home. Remember that their rules may not be the ones you remember.

Can you allow yourself to show love for a child who needs discipline and isn't getting it and then show him or her that certain kinds of behavior make you feel angry or sad or uneasy?

An example might be, "I love you, but I don't like loud noise when I'm reading. Will you play somewhere else now?" As children get older, grandparents can bargain with them and make contracts to insure certain kinds of behavior.

I don't subscribe to the old cliche that we spoil children with affection.

Spoiling with gifts is another matter, and this can be a very touchy subject. How about having an open dialogue with your son and his wife so you and your husband know how the young parents feel about gifts to their children and so you let the parents know how you feel about the matter. Then you may be able to establish a family contract about kinds of gifts and the frequency of giving.

The Staffer

By Nancy Hicks

Researchers, sociologists, stop it! Quit hammering away at the good life in Nebraska. Just let the rest of the nation keep the stereotype of this god-forsaken plains state somewhere between Indiana and Colorado.

If you must do research on how happy we are in the state of Big Red Fever, don't publish! If Lincoln turns up Number 1 on another poll, bury it in the files.

Don't let our neighbors to the east and west know that we can see the sky, can smell the fresh, clean wind, can walk to the neighbors' house in the dark unafraid, can cash a check at the local grocery without an FBI investigation.

Leave our neighbors to the north and south alone with their sick Nebraska jokes and their condescending attitude.

Let them disparge us, yes. But don't encourage them to move in.

This may sound selfish, for I'm not a native. I'm one of those back east types who sped through Nebraska's summer heat on my way to somewhere else, cursing the pesky mosquitoes and innevitable grasshoppers.

Then I moved here.

Give all those others who haven't joined me the facts.

Tell them about the biting cold and midwinter blues.

Tell them about the searing heat and midsummer blues.

Let them know that on a calm day, the wind still blows and it's not an ocean breeze.

Spread the news to the sporting enthusiasts that Nebraska's biggest wave is in the family bathtub.

Tell them their dogs could get a urinary tract infection looking for a decent treet.

Yes, give them the facts.

We are fatter than a Chicago model and less cultured than a New York socialite.

Tell the liberals who our state's U.S. senators have been.

Tell the parents we rank 49th out of the union in state aid to schools.

Let them know that the weather, not Joseph Papp, is the after dinner table talk, that grain prices are more important than L'Etoile.

Whatever you do, keep it mum that the salesclerks actually smile, that strangers do stop to dig you out of a snowdrift or help change a tire.

Tell them about my kids who like the "mountains" in Pioneers Park and who think Big Red band practice is better than Sesame Street.

Tell them our values are somewhere between grain alcohol and the fatted calf.

But keep the rest to yourself.

My three-year-old, a native grassland son, summed it up succinctly last summer. As we drove around the blackened smokestacks of Gary, Ind., he asked, "What's that smell? Is that cow poopies?"

How old is too old to have children?

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been discussing having a child. I am 30 and he is 50. We are both well-established working people at present. We are happily in love and communicate fantastically well. He is very active in sports and doesn't appear his age. He has been through a marriage and children before. (I haven't.) I am confident we would be good parents and have a lot to offer a child.

Do you think it's fair to a child to have a father with less than a full-term parenthood expectancy? We'd like your opinion and perhaps the opinions of readers who have experienced this.

FACING FACTS

DEAR FACING: The age of a father isn't nearly so important as his physical condition and his attitudes about parenthood. The fact that you question the "fairness" of having a child under the circumstances speaks well for you. I say, go ahead.

DEAR ABBY: Never, but never, did this ancient, retired schoolteacher think he would take pen in hand for such a purpose.

Before I give you the bad news, let me give you the good news: You get straight A's in written English, spelling, grammar, sentence structure and vocabulary.

But, alas, teacher must flunk you in United States history! In attempting to console a bachelor, you stated that James Buchanan, our 16th president, was also a bachelor.

Dear, dear Abby, for shame. Buchanan was our 15th president. Abraham Lincoln was our 16th.

HISTORIAN: NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

DEAR HIS: When I goof, I take my lumps. But this time I was the victim of a typographical error.

DEAR ABBY: I hope you answer this because I know I need help. I just hate children! Every time I see a mother holding her baby and making a fuss over it, I want to snatch it away from her, beat it and drop it on its head.

I'm at the age (21) when a girl starts thinking of marriage, but I loathe the thought of getting married and running the risk of having a kid. I am sure I would make a rotten mother. I can't stand to hear a baby cry. I just know I'd beat the kid to death if it ever cried for very long.

Do all people hate kids deep down, or is there something wrong with me? If you think I need help, where can I go?

HATES KIDS

DEAR HATES: I do think you need help. Get in touch with your local Mental Health Association. (They're listed in your telephone book.) I commend you on being wise enough to know that you need help and courageous enough to ask for it.

Be choosy about logs

Washington (UPI) — Choosing wood for your fireplace is not just a matter of getting the right length logs.

Woods differ in scent and heat value. Softwoods such as pine, spruce and fir catch fire easily and burn rapidly with a hot flame. But they burn out quickly, which means you must watch the fire closely to replenish it before it dies.

Hardwoods such as ash, beech, birch, maple and oak are better for long-lasting fires. They burn less vigorously and with a shorter flame. Oak provides the most uniform and shortest flames and is preferred for steady, glowing coals.

For wood with distinctive aromas, choose fruit and nut trees, including apple, cherry, beech, hickory and pecan.

For an easily lit, long-lasting and fragrant fire, start with a mixture of hard and soft woods, then add fruit or nut wood later.

Secretaries have some awfully petty chores

San Francisco (AP) — One boss stripped to the waist so his secretary could scratch his back, another warned against crumbling paper before it was tossed in the trash, and another ordered his secretary to do his wife's schoolwork.

Those were among the responses to a contest staged by the San Francisco Examiner which asked: What is the pettiest office procedure you ever encountered?

For obvious reasons, identities weren't disclosed.

A shipping clerk wrote, "We are allowed three regular restroom trips per week. Beyond the third restroom trip, you are not allowed to 'go' anymore for the week. If you do, (management) will write a letter to the union informing them that you are 'malingering.' "

New first lady not so excited

Annapolis, Md. (AP) — Mathilda Lee apparently is not looking forward to her new role as first lady of Maryland.

Friends and relatives of the acting governor's wife say she may not fit into the social whirl of the state capital. They say she'd rather backpack along the Appalachian Trail than prepare for a formal party.

"She hates to get dressed up," says her son Blair. "In a way, she is almost naive, vulnerable. She doesn't have the social instincts you'd expect."

Acting Gov. Blair Lee III officially took the reins of government when Gov. Marvin Mandel was sentenced Friday to four years in prison on political corruption charges.

When asked recently whether Maryland's state police would provide police security for his wife, Lee said, "They're going to have a hard time keeping up with her."

What if there's a fire?

Roxbury Township, N.J. (AP) — The community's fire pumper is all bright and shiny with a spiffy new coat of yellow paint.

Trouble is, city officials say they don't know who ordered the $4,000 paint job. And Lefty's Auto Body Shop in Rockaway says the pumper will stay right where it is until somebody pays up.

Assistant Township Administrator Cecile Cole said she assumed a department head authorized the facelift for the Great Eastern pumper, but "we have no copies of purchase orders or vouchers." Therefore, she said, the township could not pay the bill.

If a fire breaks out, Mrs. Cole said, the department would call in a truck from another local fire company.

It's Your Money

By Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — A good many of you are paying higher property taxes than you have to. Local assessments often show a crazy-quilt pattern, with some homeowners paying too little and others paying too much.

The middle classes, in particular, are likely to be overtaxed in relation to their fellow townsmen in the upper-middle brackets. Wealthier people tend to know more about how the tax system works, and can tell more easily if their own assessment is too high.

Every town and city has an appeals board, made up of local people, who listen to citizens who think they've been overassessed. If the board agrees, it can order your taxes to be cut.

The key to winning a property-tax case is good preparation. You have to know what the grounds for a lower assessment are, and be able to show that they apply to you. The appeals board generally sits once a year — call the town hall to find out when the next date comes up. Then start pulling your evidence together. Below are the four ways you can get your tax lowered, and how to go about proving them:

(1) The assessor made a mistake. This is a far more common situation than people realize, and can be an open and shut case for a lower assessment.

It may be simply that the assessor got bad dope about the size of your house. Your card, on file at the tax office, might credit you with one bedroom or bathroom too many, assert that your house is faced with brick when it's not, or give dimensions that are too large.

It always pays to check your property description, even if it hasn't occurred to you that your assessment could be too high. You might find that you've been taxed on the wrong basis for some time.

The assessor may also have overestimated the market value of your home. To be sure of this, it's important to know how houses are assessed in your city. Some cities base their assessment on current market values (which is what the house would sell for today); others use a fraction of the market value, which is more confusing.

For example, assume that you have a $50,000 home and — unknown to you — your town assesses at 50% of market value. If you get an assessment slip "valuing" you home at $30,000, you may think you've had a lucky break. But in fact, that valuation is too high — 50% of $50,000 would be only $25,000.

If your house is overvalued, get a statement from two real estate brokers or a local appraiser to that effect. If the description is wrong, bring dimensions and photographs to the hearing.

(2) A recent addition to your home may have been assessed on the basis of what you paid for it, which is wrong. What matters is how much the addition increased the market value. It often happens that the addition adds less value to the house than its actual cost.

(3) You may be paying a higher tax, in relation to the market value of your home, than other homeowners are. To prove this, get a list of houses sold recently that are similar to yours (a real estate agent can help). Then look up their assessments in the town hall — the records are public. Divide the average assessment by the average sales price, then divide your own assessment by your home's current market value. If your ratio is significantly higher, you're probably entitled to a tax cut.

(4) Your neighbors, who live in houses very similar to yours, may pay lower taxes than you do, or are assessed for less. This is less precise than figuring the ratio between assessment and sales price, but can be just as effective.

When you go to the hearing, have all the figures neatly prepared, with copies for the board members and photographs, if they'll help.

Sawdust mulch good for garden

Washington (UPI) — That old sawdust on your workroom floor may look like just another mess, but it can be recycled as garden mulch this time of year.

It works better if it is well rotted, or if you add a cup or two of ammonium sulfate or sodium nitrate to each bushel of fresh sawdust before spreading it on the garden, says the U.S. Department of Agriculture Consumer Information Center.

A booklet about this and other mulches is available for 50 cents from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 131E, Pueblo, Colo. 81009. Ask for "Mulches for Your Garden."

Subsoil moisture up

Ames, Iowa (UPI) — Subsoil moisture in sections of central Iowa, dangerously low last summer, is now at almost record levels, according to Iowa State University researchers.

Retail profits up

Washington (AP) — After-tax profits of retail corporations averaged 2.7 cents per sales dollar in the second quarter of 1977, the Federal Trade Commission reported.

The average was a 52% increase over the 1.9 cents in the first quarter and a 13% increase over the 2.6 cents in the second quarter of 1976.

Corn, soybean records seen

Corn and soybean production in the state could set new records if full production is realized, according to the Nebraska Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

Corn production on Oct. 1 was forecast at 648 million bushels, up 2% from the Sept. 1 estimate. Total production could surprass by 26% last year's crop of 514.6 million bushels and would exceed the previous record high production set in 1973 by 17%, the report said.

Soybean production is now forecast at a record high 42.2 million bushels, slightly more than double last year's small crop of 20.6 million and exceeding the previous record set in 1973 by 16%.

Soybean yields are expected to reach a record 33 bushels, well above last year's 20 bushel average. The 1972-76 average yield is 26.6 bushels per acre and the previous record high yield of 32.5 bushels was realized in 1972 and 1969. Acreage for harvest at 1.28 million is 24% above last year and exceeds the largest on record by nearly 6%.

Corn yield was forecast at 102 bushels per acre, up 2 bushels from last month's estimate and up 19 bushels over last year's 83-bushel average. The five-year (1972)1976) average yield is 87 bushels with the record high set in 1972 of 104 bushels per acre. The acreage intended for grain is unchanged from last month at 6.35 million, 2% above last year's harvested acreage.

Dryland corn production expectations are up from last month as harvest begins. At 163.9 million bushels, the forecast is 64% above 1976. The yield was forecast at 72.8 bushels per acre, much above last year's 40.1 bushel yield but still considerably below the record dryland yield of 85.4 obtained in 1972. Farmers plan to harvest 2.25 million acres of dryland corn for grain, 10% less than a year ago.

Irrigated corn production was forecast at 483.8 million bushels, 17% above 1976 but below the Sept. 1 forecast. The yield was forecast at 118 bushels per acre, down two bushels from Sept. 1 prospects, due in part to hail damage and anticipated heavier than normal harvest losses. Last year's yield was 112 bushels and the '72-'76 average yield is 113.2 bushels. The acreage intended for grain production is 4.1 million, nearly 11% above last year.

Sorghum grain production was forecast at 138.5 million bushels, the same as last month but 16% above last year. Yield per acre at 65 bushels is eight bushels above the 1976 average of 57. The five-year average is 57 bushels and the record high was 73 set in 1969. Acreage for harvest at 2.13 million is one percent above 1976.

Dry bean production was forecast at 1.65 million cwt., down 17% from last year. Sugar beet production was forecast at 1.4 million tons, also down 17% from last year. Fall potato production was forecast at 1.24 million cwt., down 3% from 1976. Hay production was forecast at 7.67 million tons, up 24% from 1976.

Harvest may steady food prices

Washington (AP) — The 1977 corn harvest now under way is estimated at a record 6.3 billion bushels, a huge supply of animal feed grain that will help dampen consumer food prices in the coming year, the Agriculture Department said Wednesday.

Based on surveys Oct. 1, the department's Crop Reporting Board said the corn harvest now is expected to be 1% more than the 6.23 billion bushels indicated a month ago.

Corn production last year was a record then of 6.22 billion bushels and helped push U.S. stockpiles of the leading animal feed grain to their highest level in five years by the time the new 1977 harvest was ready this fall.

The report said the soybean crop is estimated at a record of nearly 1.65 billion bushels, up 30% from the reduced 1976 harvest of 1.26 billion bushels. A month ago USDA estimated the soybean harvest at about 1.64 billion bushels.

As the leading U.S. animal feed, corn is a key raw material for producing beef, pork, poultry, eggs and milk for consumers. Soybean provide high-protein meal to supplement feed, and oil for many food products.

Farmers also are harvesting a bumper wheat crop this year, estimated at slightly less than 2.03 billion bushels, compared with 2.03 billion indicated in September and the record 1976 harvest of 2.15 billion bushels.

Huge grain harvests the past three years have caused wheat and corn prices to tumble and farm income to decline. But they also have helped cool off spiraling food prices which soared at annual rates of 14.5% in 1973 and 1974.

Food prices slowed to a gain of 8.5% in 1975 and last year rose 3.1%. This year's increase will average about 6% over the entire 12 months but more than half of the increase will be due to price jumps for coffee, seafood and other non-farm commodities, according to USDA experts.

Consumer food prices will continue rising in 1978 but probably at no greater rate than in 1977, depending on costs of imported products and on the inflation rate.

About 60% of the retail food costs are added after commodities leave the farm. Thus, as costs of transportation, processing packaging and merchandizing increase so do family grocery bills, even if farm prices hold steady or decline slightly.

Nebraskans take range contest honors

Halsey — Several Nebraska teams took top honors in the second annual Old West Regional Range Judging contest at Halsey Wednesday.

The Cody-Kilgore FFA team placed first in the FFA division with Sandhills FFA placing second. The Cody team was composed of Mark Ford, Dwaine Schneider and Roger Fullerton of Cody, and Tim Nollette of Nenzel. The Sandhills team consisted of Leon Zimmerman and Kevin Parrish of Dunning, Jim Swisher of Halsey and Bill Jensen of Purdum.

Third place in the 4-H division went to the Ainsworth 4-H team of Deb Smith, Connie Smith and Craig Smith of Ainsworth and Pam Smith of Elsmiere.

Second place open class honors went to a Lancaster County team of Pat Costello, Steve Costello, Tony Tvrdy and Rick Williams, all of Rt. 3, Lincoln.

Nebraskans also captured individual honors in several age categories.

Terry Messersmith and Brad Price of Hemingford placed first and second in the 14 to 16-year-old class. Mark Ford of Cody was third and Bryan Starr of Mullen was fourth.

Leon Zimmerman of Dunning was second and Tony Tvrdy of Lincoln was fourth in the 17-19 class. Herb Gerhard of Dunning, Bill Sitz of Sargent, Craig Anthony of Cody and Fona Hil of Ainsworth swept all four spots in the adult class.

Cheyenne farm group stands against strike

Sidney (UPI) — Cheyenne County Farm Bureau members have refused to endorse a proposed Dec. 14 farm strike and urged the reduction of railroad freight rates.

County President Bob Misgaddis of Sidney said, "we could have problems" if the proposed strike to gain full parity for feed grains occurs.

"There are other ways to look for high prices," Misgaddis said, "But no quicker way for the federal government to bring out troops to see that food is moved to market if there is a farm strike."

The some 100 members unanimously defeated the strike resolution during a Tuesday night meeting.

However, the farm group approved a resolution asking the Burlington Northern Railroad to reduce its rates between Gurley, Neb., and Galveston, Tex..

Kenneth Larson, a state Farm Bureau board member from Cheyenne County, said the Burlington Northern freight rates were cheaper from Hastings to Galveston, via the Denver gateway than from Gurley.

To ship grain it costs about $1.03 per hundred weight from Hastings and it costs $1.50 from Gurley, which is closer, Larson said.

The county members asked the state and national Farm Bureau organizations to join with them in achieving the rate reduction.

Group will attend Texas farm rally

A group of more than 40 people from Elwood, Bertrand, Cozad and the surrounding area have chartered a bus to take them to a five-state rally for American agriculture.

The rally in Amarillo, Texas, will be held Friday, with the group leaving Elwood at 2:30 a.m. A spokesperson for the group said it included farmers and businessmen who are seeking to show their support for the proposed agricultural strike on Dec. 14 if farmers don't receive 100% of parity for their products.

Ag studies get grant

Expanded faculty travel, new equipment and more publications are on the horizon for the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, thanks to a $25,000 grant from "Nebraska Farmer" magazine and Harcourt, Brace, Jovanovich, Inc., of which the magazine is a subsidiary.

"We are delighted that this group saw fit to make this significant contribution to the institute," said Dr. Martin A. Massengale, vice chancellor for agriculture and natural resources.

"We plan to use it to help institute develop to its potential," he added. Massengale noted that the money will probably be placed in long-term investments and interest from the investment will be used for development purposes.

Farmers bring up concerns

By Dominick Costello
Farm Editor

Wymore — A wide-ranging discussion touching on such subjects as the likelihood of a farmers strike, low grain prices, state aid to education and federal interference was heard here Tuesday night.

It was the first of a series of three meetings called by State Sen. Nelson Merz of Falls City in an effort to see what the Legislature can do to help farmers.

"I hope you don't think farmers aren't interested in government because we have a small crowd. We picked a good corn picking night so they are in the fields," Merz told his sparse audience of 26.

Merz was accompanied by Maresh, Senator George (Bill) Burrows of Adams, Sen. Douglas Bereuter of Utica and by a secretary from Sen. John DeCamp's office armed with a tape recorder so DeCamp could listen to the proceedings later.

The crowd was small but there were a number of subjects offered to the senators for possible legislative action in the next session.

Norman Allington of Blue Springs pointed to the sudden change in the attitudes of lenders as a serious problem for farmers. "Last spring a loan officer from my lender advised me to put in a center pivot. I couldn't see how I could pay for it with corn at $2.80 a bushel so I didn't do it," Allington said.

"Today he told me that he just might be able to renew my loan if I don't spend a nickel between now and next spring," Allington said.

Allington asked the senators to try and get the federal government working harder to sell grain overseas and get the state gasohol program moving. "We have got to get rid of this grain," he said.

Allington also asked if farmers could be given a break on licensing a semi truck but was told that was unlikely.

All four senators agreed that such a bill would never pass the Legislature because of revenue derived from the high fees for licenses.

Bereuter told the group he hoped the Legislature would provide state funds to aid farmers in building terraces and farm ponds. "I feel this will help get water into the underground water table as well as solve some other problems in conservation," he said.

Maresh asked the farmers for support of one of his favorite plans to use road land fills as dams whenever possible.

Burrows told the group he doesn't think the Legislature will bow to federal demands for a state pesticide law.

"We are the only rebel state in the union but we seem to be winning," Burrows said. "I think the federal government will send six enforcers to Nebraska. If they are like most bureaucrats it will take five of them to run the state office."

"They will give farmers a lot less trouble than a bunch of state paid inspectors would," he predicted.

The senators apparently feel there isn't much they can do about federal regulations except for everyone to put pressure on congress to change the laws. "The only other thing is to vote to secede from the union. That didn't work out too well the last time it was tried," Bereuter said.

Sen. Merz has more meetings planned. If the interest grows he will try to set up similar meetings all across Nebraska. The remaining scheduled meetings will be held Oct. 18 at Pawnee City, Oct. 20 in Auburn and Oct. 25 in Falls City.

Zoo Bar is not on tavern watch

The City Clerk's Office said the Zoo Bar as inadvertently listed erroneously as one of nine taverns on which the City Council will conduct three-month reviews.

Although shown on the council agenda as a license renewal, the application to the council was to approve the transfer of ownership of the bar to Larry Boehmer.

Valley bank to move

Des Moines (UPI) — The Valley National Bank will buy the former Iowa-Des Moines National Bank building for $1.4 million, vacating its former location by late 1978, it was announced.

Violent crimes decrease

Omaha (AP) — The total number of violent crimes reported during the first six months of the year decreased in Omaha and Lincoln from 1976 to 1977, according to the FBI's Uniform Crime Reports.

Violent crimes were listed as murder and manslaughter, rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary or breaking and entering, larceny or theft, and motor vehicle theft.

In Omaha, the total number of violent crimes during the first six months of the year dropped from 10,966 in 1976 to 10,172 in 1977. In Lincoln, the total dropped from 4,140 in 1976 to 4,050 in 1977, the report said.

Omaha reported 10 cases of murder or non-negligent manslaughter in 1976 and 15 in 1977; 93 rapes in 1976 and 77 in 1977; 390 robberies in 1976 and 422 in 1977.

There were 468 cases of aggravated assault in 1976 and 437 in 1977; 2,061 cases of burglary or breaking and entering in 1976 and 2,109 in 1977; 7,012 cases of larceny-theft in 1977 and 6,009 in 1969; 932 motor vehicle thefts in 1976 and 1,103 in 1977.

In Lincoln, there were two murders or non-negligent manslaughter cases in 1977 compared with four in 1976; 12 reported rapes in 1976 and 14 in 1977, and 40 robberies in 1977 compared with 30 in 1976.

There were 105 cases of aggravated assault in 1976 and 68 in 1977; 619 cases of burglary or breaking and entering in 1976 and 568 in 1977; 3,149 cases of larceny-theft in 1976 and 3,145 in 1977; 219 cases of motor vehicle theft in 1976 and 215 in 1977.

Nationally, the total number of reported violent crimes showed no change when compared with the first half of 1976, the report said. The number of property crimes decreased 7% nationally. Only two of the listed crimes showed increases: 8% in rape and 4% in aggravated assault.

Guard is equipped for storms

Associated Press

Gen. Edward C. Bindfer of the Nebraska National Guard said Wednesday that Army guard units are equipped and ready to help should a severe winter storm hit the state.

Binder said the guards' snow emergency plan is being implemented, particularly along Interstate 80, and its calls before winter for the prepositioning of emergency vehicles and supplies in armories across Nebraska.

"The selected vehicles are maintained with tire chains mounted and fuel tanks filled at all times from November through March," Binder said in a news release.

"In addition to this, cots, blankets and emergency rations have been issued to each armory in the event the building must be used as an emergency shelter," he said.

Binder added that selected guard members who live nearest the armories are designated to operate the equipment if needed.

Arson bureau 'suspicious' of Omaha fire

Omaha (UPI) — A fire division arson bureau spokesman said Wednesday a two-alarm fire which left an estimated $15,000 in damage to four businesses in a small northwest Omaha shopping area was of a "suspicious nature."

"We believe the fire was set by accident or on purpose by a person or persons unknown," the spokesman said. "But we have yet to determine a cause."

The two-alarm blaze apparently started in the SPS sales building and the intense heat and smoke triggered a small explosion which damaged the ceilings of a bridal shop and a music store.

Firemen said a beauty salon also sustained smoke damage.

The fire occurred in the 2600 block of N. 72nd St.

Critic blasts feds

Gibbon (AP) — The chairman of a landowners' group opposing several federal water projects in Nebraska says "the feds need to get their own house in order" before their recommendations will be taken seriously on a state level.

Mark Bolin, chairman of the Nebraska Agri-Water Council, criticized a federal recommendation that states conjuctively manage their ground and surface water before they can receive federal funds for water projects "lacks credibility when the federal government doesn't practice conjuctive management in its own projects."

York vote Friday

York (AP) — York County voters go to the polls Friday to decide whether their county commissioners should remain in office.

A dispute over a new courthouse is the major issue in the recall election. The county board voted to spend more than $2 million in mostly federal and county funds to build the new structure, but voters have twice rejected bond issues to provide money toward the construction.

Birthrate to continue decline in Nebraska, according to poll

The number of children born to Nebraska women will continue to decline over the next five years, according to a University of Nebraska-Lincoln Bureau of Sociological Research report.

The report on "Fertility in Nebraska" is the third in a series developed from a 1977 survey.

The report shows that Nebraska women follow the national pattern closely in terms of how many children they expect to have, except for the women in the 20-21 age group.

These women indicated higher childbearing expectations that women 22-30 or those under 20.

The average number of children which women in the 20-21 age group expect to have is 2.66, while the average for the 22-24 age group is 2.42 and the 25-29 category is 2.46.

This high expected family size among the 20 and 21-year-olds is not duplicated in national surveys and may reflect something unique about Nebraska or the Great Plains, said Lynn K. White, director of the bureau.

However, the figure may be influenced by the small number of women in this age group interviewed for the survey, Dr. White said.

The survey showed that Nebraska follows national trends in most areas. Larger families are expected by Catholic women, by women with less education — particularly those who did not garduate from high school — and by women who married young.

The fertility of Nebraska women generally exceeds that of the nation, however, with Nebraska women 18-34 expecting to have one-third more of a child more than the national average.

One national pattern is not followed in Nebraska at all. There is no tendency for rural and farm women to have larger families.

Most women over 30 have completed their families, according to the study.

Rape unit not likely to get funds

The Rape Crisis Center may have heard its death knell being tolled Tuesday at a meeting of the Region II Crime Commission.

The center is seeking $13,322 to operate for another year, of which $9,991 would have come from federal money under a Law Enforcement Assistance Administration grant. The commission is in charge of distributing LEAA money in Lancaster County.

The commission voted to give the center the money it asked for subject to the availability of the funds and without changing priorities for the fundings of other programs.

Translation: the center could have the money if it were available, but the money isn't available.

Lancaster County Atty. Ron Lahners, a crime commission member, said he agreed with the concept of the center, but did not favor reshuffling the other programs to provide funds.

Most of the region's $147,000 is already allocated.

Jack Vogt, director of the Open Door Health Center which operates the rape program, said after the meeting that if funds don't materialize from another source, the program would go under.

Currently, the coordinator of the program, Gina Washburn, is paid as a federal VISTA worker. Most other work is done by volunteers, Vogt said, but without a coordinator the volunteer work would become ineffective.

The VISTA grant will run out this year, Vogt said.

"Realistically, there isn't a lot of hope," he added.

Planning grant OKd to study justice system

Omaha (UPI) — The U.S. Justice Department has approved a $507,000 planning grant for the Nebraska Crime Commission.

The office of Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., said Wednesday the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration funds would be used to prepare a comprehensive plan to improve Nebraska's criminal justice system.

Zorinsky's office said the plan must contain programs to improve the overall criminal justice system including law enforcement agencies, courts and corrections.

Fire out, Tecumseh tempers still blazing

By Dean Terrill
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Tecumseh — It has been six weeks since an early morning fire gutted a downtown tavern, but figurative curls of smoke still rise in the Johnson County seat.

The town's 25-member volunteer fire department is still stove-poker hot over what it calls "an obvious case of arson" in the Labor Day weekend incident. Several firemen threatened to resign but have decided instead to cool it with "a positive approach to our problem."

Despite investigation by Tecumseh and Johnson County lawmen, the State Patrol and the state fire marshal's office, the case remains something of a mystery. So a $1,000 reward was announced this week, with the fire department and town officials spearheading the cause. The Tecumseh Chamber of Commerce put up a substantial part of the money.

"There's no question it was arson, not when 10 plastic jugs of gasoline connected by improvised wicks were found," said Mayor Virgil Blumhorst, a high school social studies teacher. "Obviously, our firemen were risking their lives in such a situation, so you can't blame them for being upset. I'm just glad nobody was hurt and they decided to stay on."

The tavern, known as Jack's Place, sustained damage estimated at between $5,000 and $10,000. The owner, Jack Plymale, was out of town at the time of the incident but was one of several persons questioned.

County Atty. Tom Morrissey has assured firemen that the investigation is continuing. When he explained that evidence is lacking, the firemen decided to try the reward "for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible."

Both Chief Darell Mahoney and volunteer fireman Jack Wolken, a former mayor, say this is Tecumseh's first known case of arson in at least 20 years. The threat to life in this instance was a matter of particular concern.

The block in which the 2 a.m. blaze occurred includes several apartments occupied by an estimated 25 to 30 persons, including several elderly people as well as some children. The volunteers were forced to wear oxygen masks while fighting the blaze.

"The whole block could have gone," reflected Mahoney, an employe of a farm implement firm. "And all those jugs needed was a little more oxygen. If even one of them would have exploded, no telling how many firemen might have been killed."

Legislative process is focus

Syracuse — A new Extension Service program aimed at involving citizens in the legislative process will be introduced to residents of southeastern Nebraska Friday at the Fair Center in Syracuse.

Residents of Seward, Lancaster, Cass, Otoe, Johnson, Nemaha, Gage, Pawnee, Saline and Richardson counties will participate.

The program, entitled "Impact '78 — Citizenship in Action," will include workshops, tours and learning activities over the next year in an effort to get Nebraskans involved with their government.

The Syracuse meeting is one of eight planned this month to kick off the program.

According to Judith Schwab, Extension home economist for Otoe County and conference coordinator, the meeting will include discussions, speakers and a panel on how citizens can participate in legislative policy.

Mrs. Edith Fenstermacher, mayor of Nebraska City, will address the noon luncheon on her job as mayor.

A morning panel on "We Care About Our Government" will feature Mrs. Bertha Price, a community and political party leader from Peru, and Mrs. Norma Hall of Elmwood, of the Nebraska WIFE organization.

Other speakers will include Janet Wilson, Extension consumer education specialist, and Dr. Roberta Sward, assistant director of Extension home economics, both are from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. Ms. Wilson, who is the statewide coordinator for the program, will speak on "How Loud Is Your Voice in Government."

Participants may attend an afternoon workshop on estate planning with Dr. Phil Henderson, agricultural economist from UNL.

Who's Stan Juelfs? You'll know soon

By Don Walton
Star Staff Writer

Although he may be well known in Nebraska's Panhandle, Stan Juelfs knows his is not a household name.

Juelfs, a Kimball businessman who will turn 49 next week, is a candidate for next year's Republican gubernatorial nomination.

In a field which includes Vance Rogers of Lincoln, Robert Phares of North Platte and, probably, Charles Thone of Lincoln, he is the least known candidate. And he knows it.

So Juelfs said Wednesday he is planning to undertake a major advertising campaign to acquaint more Nebraskans with his name.

Juelfs has already launched his campaign in a personal way (as have Rogers and Phares), toting up 20,000 miles of travel within Nebraska.

His campaign staff is "pretty well organized," he said, and he will open a campaign office in Omaha within the next few weeks. There will be a regional office in Kearney, too, and campaign staff workers in Lincoln.

Juelfs will name campaign coordinators for each region of the state, and travel into all of its nooks and crannies by airplane and motor home.

"We're going to be very mobile," he said. "We're rolling right along, and I think we're getting a good reception."

The missing ingredient is name recognition — and Juelfs began making contacts with an advertising agency Wednesday to resolve that problem.

At this time, he said, he cannot put a figure on his likely campaign expenditures.

Juelfs said he learned a great deal about campaign needs by attending the conference of Republican governors which ended in New Hampshire earlier this week.

Rogers also attended that meeting.

"We listened to various governors discuss different aspects of campaigning, including financing, staff, family involvement and media relations," Juelfs said. "It was really helpful."

Juelfs is president and chairman of the board of Stanco Petroleum, Inc., and has banking and insurance interests in Kimball. He has also served as chairman of the Kimball County Republican central committee.

In 1972, he was an unsuccessful candidate for the Legislature.

Juelfs said he believes citizens are suffering from "too much government by and for the government," rather than by and for the people.

If he is elected, he has said, he would appoint a governor's advisory task force consisting of at least 499 persons from all walks to life to assist and advise the governor.

Aspirin substitutes are just as good

San Antonio, Tex. (UPI) — Americans swallow more than 100 million aspirin tablets per day because of deceptive advertising about the drug, says Dr. Richard S. Farr, an allergy specialist and visiting professor of pathology at the University of Texas Health Science Center.

Farr said consumers have been misled into believing aspirin products are a cure-all for every ache or ailment, but that aspirin substitutes reduce pain and fever just as well.

Hyde sees gap of trillions

Associated Press

Harlow Hyde, independent candidate for Congress, Wednesday estimated the Social Security system could be underfunded by up to $5 trillion between now and the mid-21st century.

"Concisely stated," Hyde said in a position paper, "even with past tax increases and future tax increases already built into the law, the Social Security system won't take in enough money to pay out the benefits which have been promised to future generations."

Hyde is an independent candidate for Congress in Nebraska's 1st Congressional District. A Lincolnite, he has been a state government budget analyst in recent years.

Hyde's $5 trillion figure projected through the year 2050 is based on the possibility of 7% inflation. He said the U.S. Treasury already projects underfunding of between $2.6 trillion and $4.1 trillion for the period.

Tracing the history of social security, Hyde said the so-called contributions that amount to taxes have increased from $30 per worker in 1937 to a maximum of $2,142 next year.

"The tax increases, while a frustration, are not the issue," he said. "The problem is so immense and unbelievable that most people and politicians simply recoil and seek escapist solutions rather than attempting to deal with the situation honestly and completely."

Hyde's 15-page position paper on Social Security included an extensive proposal for reform that aims toward making the system financially sound.

His two major proposals would eliminate the double-indexing of benefit increases that have been in effect four years and would require that federal employes pay into the program.

Hyde is seeking the congressional seat held by Rep. Charles Thone, a Republican who is reportedly planning a bid for governor next year.

Livestock show, queen contest both on weekend

The beauties and the beasts will be on display this weekend at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's East Campus.

The beasts will be exhibited Friday night as the UNL Livestock Club hosts its annual student livestock showmanship contest in the East Campus livestock judging pavillion.

The beauties will be featured Saturday night at the annual Block and Bridle Club alumni dance in the old student union on East Campus.

Four students have been named as queen finalists and will be voted on by the clubs membership, according to reigning queen Jean Ann Cook of Crawford.

Vying for the title this year are Marilyn Barr of Liberty, Linda Johnson of Blair, Patty Lutter of Valentine and Deborah Uhrig of Hemingford. The queen is responsible for representing the club at each of its events for one year.

All university students are eligible for the round robin showmanship competition in beef and dairy cattle, horse, sheep and swine divisions, according to Roger Bissell of Kearney, co-chairman of the event. Students who enter will draw their animals by lottery and have one week to turn them into show-ring winners. The fruits of their efforts will be displayed during the Friday show.

The competition is divided into novice and expert classes for each species, with the two winners competing against one another for the division championship, Bissell explained.

Ak-Sar-Ben in Omaha will provide plaques to the two champions and to the top showmen of each species, and ribbons to the top 10 finishers in each division.

A special feature of the livestock show will be a round robin showmanship event for animal science professors.

Nebraskan pleads innocent to Montana double-slaying

Helena, Mont. (AP) — Andrew C. Sunday, one of three Nebraskans accused of killing a Lewis and Clark County couple in a gun battle over stolen horses, pleaded innocent in district court here Wednesday.

Judge Gordon Bennett refused bail for Sunday, 36, but granted permission for Sunday and his lawyer to visit the site where L. Kenneth McLean, 67, and his wife Marion, 41, were shot to death on Sept. 6.

Sunday's lawyer, John Atkins, asked the judge to dismiss one of the five charges — burglary — and Bennett set a hearing for Oct. 26.

The other defendants in the case, James V. Wilson, and They Mitchell, 22, had entered their innocent pleas earlier. They also were granted permisson to accompany their lawyers to the scene of the deaths.

Sheriff's officers say the McLeans, armed with handguns, were shot to death east of the town of Lincoln when they confronted the Nebraskans on Alice Creek. The McLeans reportedly had trailed some horses that had been stolen from their resort on the east side of Rogers Pass, a few miles from where the couple was killed.

Sunday and Wilson are charged with stealing the horses.

Sunday, Wilson and Mitchell, all from Lincoln, Neb., were arrested in Pendleton, Ore., on Sept. 10.

Shotgunner gets 5-year term

Council Bluffs, Iowa (UPI) — An Omahan who showed "no more regard for human life than for a covey of quail" has received a five-year prison sentence for his part in a 1976 shotgunning of an after hours bar which resulted in eight injuries.

Pottawattamie County District Court Judge Paul Sulhoff Tuesday sentenced Randolph Scott Jr., 22, to five years on each of three convictions of assault with intent to commit manslaughter. Sulhoff ordered the sentences served concurrently.

Scott's attorney, C. R. Hannan IV, said his client was drunk at the time and regretted the incident which occurred in Council Bluffs. Hannan said Scott was willing to plead guilty to an attempted manslaughter charge within 48 hours after his arrest.

The prosecution had sought convictions on attempted murder charges, and Assistant County Attorney Joseph Hrvol told Sulhoff that Scott showed "no more regard for human life than for a covey of quail."

Scott's companion when the incident occurred, Veronica Caniglia, 25, of Omaha, pleaded guilty to one count of assault with intent to commit manslaughter and is serving a five-year prison term.

Fugitive charged with stabbing

Omaha (UPI) — A man who escaped from the St. Louis jail last year after receiving a life sentence for murder has been charged with the Oct. 5 stabbing of an Omahan.

Larry Wayne, 27, was captured following the stabbing after being shot in the leg by an Omaha police officer.

Wayne was wheeled into municipal court Tuesday where his bond was set at $25,000 in the stabbing of James Freeman, 27.

An extradition hearing to return Wayne to Missouri on an escape charge was scheduled for next month.

Dodgers even WS behind homers

New York (UPI) — Ron Cey, Steve Yeager and Reggie Smith shell-shocked Jim "Catfish" Hunter with rocket-like homers and the Los Angeles Dodgers evened the World Series at one game apiece by bombing the New York Yankees 6-1 Wednesday night behind the five-hit pitching of Burt Hooton.

The Dodgers, who led the National League in home runs this year with 191, got a two-run homer from Cey in the first inning, a solo shot from Yeager in the second and a two-run blast from Smith in the third to take a quick lead the Yankees were unable to overcome.

Steve Garvey added the Dodgers' sixth run when he led off the ninth with a home run off ace reliever Sparky Lyle.

The best-of-seven series, after a travel day Thursday, resumes in Los Angeles Friday night, with Tommy John pitching for the Dodgers and Mike Torrez hurling for the Yankees.

While the Dodgers' booming was the catalyst, it was the strong pitching of Hooton which made Manager Tom Lasorda smile the most.

Hooton had been a major disappointment in the recently-concluded playoffs with Philadelphia when he lost his composure over an umpire's controversial call and had to be relieved in the second inning of the third game.

The Dodgers' right-hander said he learned his lesson from that episode — and he showed it Wednesday night, striking out eight and twice pitching out of ticklish situations.

Using his knuckle curve to perfection and showing a good fastball which kept the Yankee hitters off stride, Hooton did not allow an extra base hit and walked only one batter.

Yankees' Manager Billy Martin took a big risk in starting Hunter, who had not pitched since Sept. 10 because of an injury. But with his pitching staff depleted after a wearying playoff against Kansas City, Martin had no choice and was hoping for at least "five or six innings" from his former meal ticket.

But from the opening inning, it was apparent that the crowd was not going to see the "Catfish" pitch one of the classics that had characterized his past World Series' performances at Oakland.

Instead of seeing "Catfish," they saw "Shellfish."

With two out in the second inning, Yeager unloaded another bomb about 400 feet into the left field stands to make it 3-0.

Following Smith's homer, Martin took pity on Hunter and the five-time 20-game winner left to a chorus of boos and catcalls from the hometown fans. Dick Tidrow came in and stopped the Dodgers before leaving for a pinch hitter in the fifth.

Reggie blasts Hunter decision

New York (AP) — Reggie Jackson struck out twice, grounded into a rally-killing double play, flied softly to center field and then, after the game was over, lashed out at Manager Billy Martin for sending Catfish Hunter to the mound in the second game of the World Series Wednesday night.

"How could the (expletive deleted) pitch him," Jackson fumed following the New York Yankees 6-1 loss to the Los Angeles Dodgers that squared the Series at one game apiece.

"He hasn't pitched since Sept. 16 (actually Sept. 10)," Jackson said of Hunter, his former Oakland teammate in the years when the A's were winning pennants and championships.

LA power 'for real,' says Lasorda

New York (UPI) — The Los Angeles Dodgers' power that led to a 6-1 victory over the New York Yankees in the second game of the World Series Wednesday night is "for real," according to Manager Tom Lasorda.

What's more, catcher Steve Yeager, who hit one of the four home runs, says "It's just a matter of time before we hit them out before anybody, anywhere."

"It's ironic, the way people ask us about our power," said Lasorda. "We're the first team ever to have four men who hit 30 homers each in the same season. These guys are for real. They can hit the ball out anywhere.

"They told us Yankee Stadium might have distances too far for us. But we've hit homers out of other big parks, too."

Yeager, whose second-inning homer off Jim Hunter gave the Dodgers a 3-0 lead, said, "Some people don't realize this is a very explosive club. The long ball threat is always there."

Asked to assess Burt Hooton's five-hit performance, Yeager said the Dodgers' strategy was to show the Yankees the big right-hander's unusual "knuckle curve" early and then mix it with fastballs and curves.

"I think I may have called for too many knuckle curves during the middle innings," Yeager said.

Yeager said pitching Coach Red Adams went to the mound when Hooton was pitching to George Zeber in the fifth and reminded the pitcher and catcher, "Don't forget you've got a fastball and a curve ball too."

Carpenter to miss ISU

By Dave Sittler
Staff Sports Writer

Jeff Carpenter's football dream was dealt a shattering blow Wednesday afternoon.

The Nebraska co-captain and linebacker who had termed this Saturday's game with Iowa State the biggest of his career, was hit with the deflating news that he must spend the next three days in the hospital because of an infected elbow.

The Council Bluffs, Iowa, senior had been pointing to the Cyclone contest because of the natural home state ties and the fact he almost attended Iowa State.

But his plans were wiped out by Nebraska doctors who ordered him hospitalized because the staph infection in his left elbow has not responded to treatment.

"This game means so much to me," said Carpenter as he leaned against the dressing room wall, fighting a losing battle with his emotions. "Now I won't even be able to see it."

Cornhusker trainer George Sullivan said Carpenter's infected arm would have to be drained to avoid further problems.

"He should be ready to go next week," Sullivan said.

The 6-1, 218-pound Carpenter said the elbow started bothering him last Friday nd started to swell and increase in pain during the second half of the Kansas State game.

Doctors had first thought rest and treatment of the elbow would enable Carpenter to face Iowa State. But after a check, they ordered him into the hospital Wednesday night.

A year ago, Carpenter saw considerable action against the Cyclones when Husker linebacker Clete Pillen was injured.

"Because of some things that happend last year a 37-28 NU loss and this being my last year, I had my heart set on this game," Carpenter said. "All I feel like doing right now is crying."

Carpenter will be replaced in the Nebraska lineup by James Wightman. Bruce Dunning and Tom Vering will back up Wightman and Nebraska's other linebacker, Lee Kunz.

Nebraska coach Tom Osborne indicated the rest of his squad appeared in good physical shape for the Big Eight Conference contest.

Safety Larry Valasek missed Wednesday's two-hour workout with a sore back. But the Silver Creek native reported the injry was "nothing serious. I'll show up."

Osborne said Randy Garcia would open at quarterback and fullback Monte Anthony, who has responded to treatment for a tender shoulder, will draw the starting nod ahead of veteran Dodie Donnell.

Questioned about the number of audibles his quarterbacks are calling this season, Osborne pointed out that both of I-back Isaiah Hipp's touchdown runs last week against K-State were plays called at the line of scrimmage.

"Both of those touchdowns started out to be passes," Osborne said. "Audibles are kind of a chance thing."

Hipp, who scored on runs of 66 and 82 yards and has rushed for more than 200 yards the past two Saturdays, continues to draw national attention.

Doug Looney of Sports Illustrated was in Lincoln Wednesday, visiting with Hipp and Richard Berns. Looney, who will remain in the Capital City for the Nebraska-Iowa State tilt, indicated his assignment centered around the Nebraska I-backs.

Commission sets 1978 race dates

The Nebraska State Racing Commission Wednesday granted a total of 198 racing days to Nebraska tracks, in 1978 including 36 days to the Lincoln Fairgrounds in a split session designed to avoid racing during the Nebraska State Fair.

The commission also reaffirmed its policy announced in 1973 that the months of March and April are to be reserved for Grand Island's Fonner Park and May, June and July dates belong to Ak-Sar-Ben track in Omaha.

Grand Island was awarded six full and three partial weeks, beginning March 2 and extending through 40 race days to April 29, while Ak-Sar-Ben obtained 13 weeks of racing (65 days) from May 2-July 29.

Lincoln then opens for a three-week stint July 31 and runs through Aug. 19, and reopens Sept. 18 for another three weeks, closing Oct. 7.

Sandwiched between the two Lincoln sessions will be a four-week Columbus meeting set to run from Aug. 22-Sept. 16.

Following the Lincoln meet, the ponies will move to Atokad for eight weeks or 36 days between Oct. 4 and Nov. 26.

'Deeeee-fense' key Friday? Southeast favored to win

Prep Picks

By Randy York

If you think watching baseball managers play chess games these past two weeks is nerve-wracking, wait until Friday night when No. 1-ranked Southeast and No. 4 Northeast collide in the Lincoln prep football showdown of the season.

It could boil down to another defensive dogfight similar to last week's 3-0 East win over Northeast. A field goal, an extra point or a fumble recovery could be the key play.

In other words, "deeeee-fense" could be a more worn-out cheer than "two bits" used to be.

"It'll probably be a typical city game," predicts Southeast coach Frank Solich. "For the most part, teams seem to struggle offensively because the hitting gets so intense in a city game."

Solich admits there's more to the low-scoring results.

"To some degree, coaches get too conservative in games like this. I know I do," he says. "You're afraid to make that first mistake — that fumble which could be the difference in the ball game."

Looking at the Rocket defense on film serves to make Solich even more cautious.

"Like Leroy Zentic says, you can't find a weakness anywhere," Solich says. "People just do not move the football on Northeast. We've been a four to five yards a carry offense this season and they don't give you that."

Solich, however, has no worries about his team's mental frame of mind.

"We've broken our season down to two parts," he says. "We've won four of five on the road and we feel we really accomplished something there. Now, it's back-to-back city games (next week it's East) and we're just hoping for survival."

The weekend menu looks like this:

Lincoln Southeast (5-0) vs. Lincoln Northeast (5-1), Friday night, Seacrest Field — If Joe Fan got a chance to look at last week's Grand Island film, he'd understand the top-ranked Knights aren't invincible. Grand Island's offensive line moved off the ball with authority. The same kind of effort from the Rockets would scramble the Class A ratings even more.

Lexington (4-2) at Lincoln Pius X (5-0), Friday night — The Minutemen stumbled out of the blocks this season. But like good sprinters, they still have hopes of hitting the finish line ahead of the foe. Fairbury and Omaha Ryan were formidable, but Lex looks like the toughest test of the season for the 'bolts.

Lincoln High (3-3) at Columbus (1-4-1), Friday night — Last week's 7-7 tie with Hastings put the Discoverers back on the right track, but it was nothing compared to the Links' 38-8 derailment of Fremont. Lincoln High has decided to send some smoke signals outdoors before bracing for another excellent basketball season indoors.

Hastings (2-2-1) vs. Lincoln East (4-2), Saturday night, Seacrest Field — With their backs to the wall last week, the Spartans came through. A loss of momentum before winding up against Southeast and Lincoln High seems unlikely.

Arkansas certain to 'outcal' Texas, former Husker Kiffin says

By Randy York
Staff Sports Writer

Arkansas defensive coordinator Monte Kiffin isn't sure how his youthful Black Shirts will do Saturday against Texas' Earl Campbell & Co., in a nationally-televised game at Fayetteville, Ark.

"We may not tackle very well and we may not outplay them, but I guarantee we'll outcal them," Nebraska's former defensive coordinator says with a familiar chuckle.

Kiffin was referring to Razorback head coach Lou Holtz's renowned pre-game calisthenics, which entertain crowds almost as much as a high-stepping band.

"People come early just to watch us do cals," Kiffin says. "They're a show in themselves. It looks like a Marine drill team out there. Lou Holtz is a stickler for precision. He actually has cals filmed and goes over it with the players."

His rah-rah enthusiasm and motivation theories didn't quite jive in a pro football atmosphere. During a rainstorm last year, for instance, he kept the Jets 30 minutes after practice to clean up their National Anthem act.

"You can say what you want, but the kids really love the guy. He's a players' type of coach," Kiffin relates.

The Thursday night before the Hogs played Oklahoma State this year, Holtz invited the team to his house for ping pong, pool, soft drinks, taped radio broadcasts and a magician he hired for entertainment.

"The night before a game, he goes to every player's room and talks," Kiffin says. "He's tough — a real disciplinarian, but his door is always open."

Obviously immersed in the eighth-ranked Razorback program now, Kiffin admits feeling a certain emptiness last Sept. 10 before the Saturday night home opener against New Mexico State.

"With Warren and Tom going against each other that afternoon, I wanted to be there either coaching with 'em or against 'em," Kiffin recalls. "When we got on the bus to go to Little Rock, I thought to myself: 'What the hell am I doing in Fayetteville, Arkansas, going to play New Mexico State?' "

The first game feeling was probably similar for other Arkansas staff members. Holtz hired a coach from Alabama, Texas, Auburn and SMU in addition to Kiffin and retaining three from Frank Broyles' staff.

"You ought to see this group," Kiffin says. "It's pandemonia out there. I have to restrain some of these guys. Holtz was halfway out on the field once before we got him back."

Kiffin has experienced one other eventful flashback this fall in his new environment.

"We played Okie State the night Nebraska played Alabama, so I turned on the tube and the first thing I heard was Nebraska's school song," he points out.

"It was a heckuva feeling. I was glad to get on the bus and head for the stadium. It's hard not to think about all the good memories of Nebraska," Kiffin says.

"But I'm getting caught up in this program, too," he adds. "These are good, hard-working kids. They got fired up about wearing Black Shirts. Some of them even wanted to take their Black Shirts home for the summer."

One of Kiffin's biggest adjustments is getting used to the idea of having two home stadiums — one in Fayetteville (45,000 cap.) and another in Little Rock (55,000 cap.).

"They're all Razorback fans, but they're two completely different atmospheres. It's day games at Fayetteville and night games at Little Rock.

"We're 3½ hours from Little Rock, so there might be 30,000 different people at those games than the ones who attend at Fayetteville. It's like Nebraska playing one week in Lincoln and the next week in North Platte."

Kiffin says "people down here still talk about beating Nebraska (10-7) in the '65 Cotton Bowl for the national championship. I was a graduate assistant under Bob Devaney that year, so I take some kidding."

No one is kidding about Kiffin's defense this year though, even though nine underclassmen, start and two standouts have been lost for the season.

All-American free safety Larry White underwent a neck operation after the Oklahoma State game and middle guard Dale White underwent knee surgery after the TCU game.

Kiffin would worry about such things, but neither athlete is missed that much.

They were lousy in calisthenics.

New probe of NCAA sought

Stillwater, Okla. (AP) — U.S. Rep. Ted Risenhoover, D-Okla., wants a new congressional investigation of the National Collegiate Athletic Association expanded to include the NCAA's probe of the Oklahoma State University football program, a Risenhoover aide said Wednesday.

Joe Carter, top aide to the congressman, quoted Risenhoover as saying that "apparently the NCAA is concentrating on Oklahoma schools, (and) I'm sick and tired of it."

U.S. Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., began an investigation of the NCAA and its probe into the basketball program at Las Vegas-Nevada on Oct. 4 after 15 congressmen, including Risenhoover, asked for the probe.

Moss is chairman of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee.

Las Vegas-Nevada was recently hit with several penalties, including probation and a recommendation that Coach Jerry Tarkanian be suspended, for alleged recruiting violations.

Tarkanian has sued and the resulting issue prompted the congressional probe into the methods the NCAA used in its two-year investigation.

Oklahoma State also has been under investigation for over two years. However, part of that time was because of two delays granted by the NCAA at the request of the school for more time to answer the allegations.

But earlier this week, sources close to the NCAA had said that Oklahoma State would be assessed two years probation, lose 15 football scholarships over the next two years, have two players declared ineligible and have several alumni barred from helping the program.

The ruling was supposed to have been handed down Tuesday, but was delayed indefinitely at the last minute when attorneys for the two players and alumni lodged protests against the NCAA's methods.

In Risenhoover's letter to Moss, the Oklahoma Democrat said: "There are strong reasons to believe the NCAA may be violating antitrust laws, assessing penalties that lack fairness and equity, but perhaps most important, the NCAA may be denying due process (of law)."

Risenhoover specifically referred to the allegations against players Jim Clark and Mike Edwards.

Clark is accused of attending a signing party allegedly paid for by an alumni while Edwards is accused of not yet paying a Stillwater, Okla., travel agency for a trip home.

"I just can't believe the NCAA is doing this," says Clark, a sophomore who also wrestles. The NCAA charges that OSU alumni Jim Treat paid for a party after Clark signed with Oklahoma State.

"But Mr. Treat didn't pay for it," Clark says. "Francis Wheeler paid for it. He told me before I signed with anyone that he'd like to take me and my friends out when I signed with whoever I signed with.

"He's a former assistant coach with Tulsa University. You think he's an OSU booster? I've known him and worked for him since junior high. He's a good friend.

"He signed a sworn affidavit that he paid for the party. The NCAA took it and threw it in the trash. They don't have any proof that Jim Treat paid for anything — not a canceled check or anything."

NU snaps soccer loss streak

By Ken Hambleton
Staff Sports Writer

Dave Egr and Abel Alvarez each scored on shots from the corners to help the University of Nebraska Soccer Club snap a three-game losing streak with a 2-1 win over Concordia Wednesday afternoon at Mable Lee Field.

NU took the lead in the game when Jim Fullerton passed the ball to midfielder Jim Fisher, who then centered to Alvarez to set up the 10-yard goal from the corner with 14 minutes left in the first half.

Shooting was even in the first half with each team taking 12 shots, but Concordia stormed back in the second half, outshooting Nebraska 16-6.

One of the few NU second-half charges was all the Huskers needed, though, as Egr, a consistent scoring winger, booted a 15-yarder in past Bulldog goalie Deflet Kemnitz to put NU ahead 2-0 with 23 minutes left in the second half.

Nebraska's only serious mistake of the afternoon came two minutes later when Husker goalie Victor Bishop was caught directing traffic when Concordia's Bob Groth kicked in a goal from 20 yards out, closing the score to 2-1 with 20 minutes remaining.

Concordia's kickers continued to press, firing 12 more shots, but Bishop, who was credited with 12 saves, and the swarming NU defense kept the Bulldogs from scoring to preserve the win.

"This is much better than we've played our last three games," said Husker coach Ron Joyce. "We played as a team and won as a team.

"Both Egr and Alvarez took advantage of opportunities to score and that's what we're going to have to do in order to win games," Joyce said.

"I can't blame Bishop for that goal against us, because it was a good solid, high kick in the corner of the net and would have been very hard to stop," Joyce said.

"Concordia fought for the ball in the second half, but we played as good as we have all year," Joyce added.

Concordia assistant coach Joel Wehrspann and coach John Kinworthy agreed that the game was decided by the Bulldogs' late start. "Once we got going we didn't look too bad, but we took so long to get going," said Wehrspann.

"We had the chances to score, but the ball wouldn't go in," said Kinworthy, whose team is now 6-3. "We've lost here seven years straight and today we lost because we were not the best team on the field."

Nebraska, now 3-3, hosts Creighton at Memorial Stadium at 4:30 p.m. following the Iowa State-Nebraska football game Saturday. Concordia hosts nationally ranked Avila College of Kansas City Saturday at 11 a.m. in Seward.

Dodgers fume as pictures show Garvey safe

New York (AP) — "It is a crime — Steve was definitely safe and the umpire was out of position," Manager Tommy Lasorda of the Los Angeles Dodgers fumed Wednesday after viewing still photographs of a sixth-inning play that had a vital effect on the first World Series baseball game.

"I thought I beat the throw and this proves it," said Steve Garvey a central figure in the controversial decision.

It happened in the sixth inning of the opening game between the Dodgers and the New York Yankees, a thrilling battle won by New York 4-3 in the 12th inning.

Garvey, the Los Angeles first baseman, had beaten out a bunt and then raced home on a shot to right center by Glenn Burke.

Yankees centerfielder Mickey Rivers handled the ball and threw home, the throw sailing slightly to the right side of home plate. There was a cloud of dust as Garvey made his slide and umpire Nestor Chylak raised his thumb for an out call.

The Dodgers erupted in a strong but futile protest.

The run, if it had been scored would have given the Dodgers a 3-1 lead and in retrospect could have given them the first game victory.

A series of three pictures made by Associated Press photographers showed clearly that Garvey had gotten his foot on the base before being tagged by catcher Thurman Munson.

Chylak had moved around to the first base side and was not in front of the play where he normally would have been.

"It's the position that bothers me," Lasorda said. "Look, Chylak is all out of position. What is he doing on that side of home plate anyhow?"

Jabbar inks lifetime pact

Los Angeles (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar said he wanted it stated in writing that he would finish out his National Basketball Association in Los Angeles, and the Lakers' superstar center got his wish.

Abdul-Jabbar has asked for and received a virtual lifetime contract with the Lakers, the team announced.

The league's five-time MVP, Abdul-Jabbar had signed a five-year contract for a reported $3 million when he came to Los Angeles from the Milwaukee Bucks.

The new agreement, worked out between Lakers owner Jack Kent Cooke and Abdul-Jabbar's attorney, extends the contract for the duration of his NBA career.

Abdul-Jabbar, 30, said he wants to play as long as he holds up physically and mentally. The former UCLA All-American had previously played six seasons with the Bucks.

It remains seriously unlikely that Cleveland Browns defensive tackle Jerry Sherk will play against the Houston Oilers this Sunday, making it six weeks that the Browns have had to do without their Pro Bowl defender. Sherk suffered knee ligament damage in a pre-season game at Green Bay.

Ken Payne, wide receiver for the Green Bay Packers, has been fined and suspended for one week for insubordination, coach Bart Starr has announced. A spokesman said the insubordination occurred on the sidelines during the Packers' 17-7 loss to the Cincinnati Bengals last Sunday.

A 16-year-old high school senior's fight to change girls' basketball rules in Tennessee to correspond more to boys' rules will be taken to the U.S. Supreme Court, according to her father. And it ignored the fact that similar cases are pending in the courts in three other states with similar rules, said James Cape, father of Victoria Ann Cape.

Marvin Barnes, whose basketball career with the Detroit Pistons was set back by a prison sentence, will be released Friday after serving four months behind bars for violating parole.

LA not automatically '84 Games host

Dublin (UPI) — Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, Wednesday said Los Angeles would not automatically be given the 1984 Summer Olympics just because it might be the only bidder.

"We don't know if Los Angeles will be awarded them," Killanin told UPI. "The closing date for the bids is Oct. 31 and at that time the questionnaires will be sent out to the cities bidding for both the S u m m e r and Winter Games.

"Their replies will be considered by the IOC session in Athens next May." At the moment, Los Angeles is the only bidder for the Summer Games, he said.

One high-ranking IOC source said that if Los Angeles remained the only bidder and if its replies were unsatisfactory, the IOC might consider reopening the bidding.

Killanin said the IOC would be studying any proposed television contract at the 1984 games very carefully.

Under IOC rules, the organizing committee of an Olympic Games has to give the IOC the first million dollars of any television contract, two-thirds of the second million and a third of every other million after that.

"But that is not the problem should Los Angeles be awarded the Games," Killanin said. "The problem then is that in every other country in the world there is the equivalent of a state television network.

"When that network hosts the Games it provides the signal for other television companies all round the world. But in the United States, the networks are private."

Several IOC members have been upset by the fact that Los Angeles last week sent a delegation to the General Assembly of Sports Federations in Monte Carlo as though it had already been awarded the 1984 games.

The IOC rules forbid any kind of lobbying for the Olympics by a city and some members pointed out that it was the IOC who had to be satisfied that Los Angeles could stage the Games, not the International Sports Federations.

Cyclones hone attack for NU

Ames, Iowa (AP) — Coach Earle Bruce ran Iowa State's football squad through its final contact drills of the week Wednesday with a special emphasis placed on honing the Cyclone's improving offense.

The Cyclones face ninth-rated Nebraska Saturday at Lincoln, where they have won only three of the 27 games played there between the two schools.

"Nebraska has a typically tough defense," Bruce said Wednesday, "although I would have to say the Black Shirts are playing with a more aggressive 'come-at-you' type of defense installed by new coordinator Lance Van Zandt.

"Their personel help make them a good team," he added. "Nebraska has those big tackles, good ends and linebackers and a strong secondary that has intercepted a lot of passes."

Both teams are 4-1 for the season and 1-0 in the Big Eight Conference.

NU runners seek first win

Looking for its first win of the season, the University of Nebraska cross country team will host Drake in a dual meet Saturday at 10:30 a.m.

The meet will be run over four miles at the Husker home course at Wilderness Park, First and Van Dorn streets.

Drake brings an all-American to Lincoln in senior Boyd Nansel. Nansel won the Iowa State Open Cross Country Meet on Sept. 10, finishing ahead of 168 other runners.

Nebraska will run seniors Steve Allen and Harold Stelzer; juniors Pat Colburn, Mark Fluitt, Kevin Hoffman, and Jeff Thurman; and freshman Brian Dunnigan.

Last year Nebraska defeated Drake 25-33 in Des Moines.

NWU runners to Le Mars

The Nebraska Wesleyan cross country team will compete Saturday in the Westmar Invitational at Le Mars, Iowa. The Plainsmen were rained out of a dual against Doane Friday.

"There will probably be 15 teams there, and it will probably be the toughest meet we go to all year," says NWU Coach Woody Greeno. "Mankato St. (Minn.), South Dakota U. and UNO will all be there, and they have some of the best teams in the North Central Conference."

Game-Parks meeting

Public hearings on 1978 fishing regulations, and amendments to boating and snowmobile regulations are among items on the agenda for the Game and Parks Commission's Friday meeting in the Capital City.

It's All Outdoors

By Tom Vint

It's whooping crane time

It's whooping crane spotting time in Nebraska, according to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission and the National Audubon Society.

The annual migration southward coincides with that of other waterfowl species which put thousands of hunters out to line lakes and streamsides. Some may be fortunate enough to see one of the rare and endangered whoopers.

If a whooper is spotted, contact one of the above agencies with time, day and place of the observation.

But how to be sure it was a whooper? Many sightings each fall and spring are found to be inaccurate. Some pelicans, some snow geese, some herons and cranes are called in as whooper sightings. There are helpful hints to ensure you're observing a whooping crane.

The National Audubon Society has these helpful hints:

"The whooping crane stands more than 4 feet tall; in flight its black wingtips are visible and its long dark legs extend beyond the tail. It has a wingspan of 7½ feet. Immature whooping cranes are rusty red and white but have the distinctive black wingtips.

The sandhill crane lacks the black wingtips and is slightly smaller, 4 feet or less, with a 6-foot wingspan. This bird is gray, not white, although sandhill cranes may look white in certain light, and albino or partly albino birds occasionally are seen. Nevertheless, they all lack the identifying black wingtips.

The white pelican may be confused with the whopping crane, especially in flight. But the black markings on its 8-foot wingspan extend almost to its body, and its yellow legs are not visible beyond the tail.

Swans, too, have a broad wingspan, as much as 6½ feet, but they are all-white and their short legs do not extend behind in flight.

The snow goose is a much smaller bird, with a wingspan of under 5 feet. Although it has black wingtips, this species, like swans, has very short legs.

The wood stork has wings marked with black and legs that extend behind in flight. But it has a wingspan of only 5½ feet and a distinctive dark head and neck with a long, slightly curved bill."

Endangered bobcats?

The lynx rufus, commonly known as the bobcat, is becoming an endangered species, according to the National Wildlife Federation. In a survey conducted by the Federation, the bobcat population of the contiguous 48 states is in jeopardy, it was found.

Once a valuable fur commodity in nearly every state, now the bobcat population is slipping. Nearly half of the 48 states regard the species as nearly gone. Delaware has already reported it as extinct.

Only Kansas and North Carolina report increases in bobcat populations, while 25 other states regard the numbers as stable. Nebraska, this past year, established the bobcat as a protected nongame animal. It has a hunting season from Dec. 1 to Jan. 31, to include trapping.

"We don't have a population estimate," said Ross Lock, the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission's nongame specialist. "But we don't regard the bobcat as an endangered species at this time. Our trapping harvest has gone up the past three years, but we do not regard this as an indicator the population is increasing. We view that as an indicator the pressure by trappers has increased and this indicates the population of bobcat at least is not in a serious decline."

Lock said a decline in the trapping harvest of bobcat would cause concern in that this would likely indicate a drop in the overall population of the species. At that time something might be done to further protect the species, he noted.

Nebraska is one of 15 states to classify the bobcat as an animal to be regulated by hunting and trapping seasons.

Hunters safety clinics set

The V.F.W. and the Game and Parks Commission are cosponsoring another hunter safety course to begin Sunday at V.F.W. Post 131 at 3800 Cornhusker. The two-session course will be from 1-4 p.m. Sunday and from 6-9 p.m. Tuesday. The courses will certify youngsters to hunt in Nebraska under state law. Contact the V.F.W. or the Game and Parks Commission for further information.

The Lincoln Parks and Recreation Department will also conduct a hunter safety certification course, Oct. 24, 25, and 26 at the Antelope Shelter, northeast of the Auld Recreation Center at 31st and Sumner, 7 to 9 p.m.

Hunter safety training is a must for all youth ages 12 through 15 if they plan to hunt this fall. Everyone who completes the course will be awarded a "safe hunter" patch and certification.

To register, call the Parks and Recreation office. Adults are welcome too.

Outdoor recreation features waterfowl

Outdoorsmen are turning more and more of their attention to the autumn sky for signs of duck and goose movements, as October's advance brings the opening of more waterfowl seasons.

Saturday, Oct. 8, saw the opening of the season on Canada and white-fronted geese, and the next weekend opens duck hunting across the state. Blue and snow goose hunters have been in business since Oct. 1.

Those watching the sky lately have seen signs of the season's advance in the numbers and varieties of birds on the wing. Many parts of the state report duck and goose movements, but waterfowl aren't the only birds migrating now. The Panhandle has an influx of hawks moving through, while the Sand Hills and Central Nebraska report flights of sandhill cranes. Eastern Nebraska has had bunches of gulls move through.

Waterfowlers preparing for some duck and goose hunting on state lands are reminded of regulations prohibiting construction of permanent blinds on most of these areas. While hunters may use portable blinds that they remove at the end of the day, the permanent structures are not allowed.

Though hunting is taking over the outdoor scene, some fishing activity is also apparent. According to reports of Game and Parks Commission conservation officers in the field, outdoor activity includes:

PANHANDLE — prospects appear good for the duck opener on Oct. 15, with water conditions in potholes looking good, and populations of pintails, mallards and wigeon building up on the North Platte River and upper Lake casional perch to 1 pound on worms.

Fishermen at Box Butte Reservoir report taking northern pike to 4 pounds on artificials, and occasional perce to 1 pound on worms.

SOUTHWEST — Geese have been seen moving through Dawson County and Harlan County Reservoir, and there is some buildup of pintails and teal on the reservoir. Fishermen at Sutherland Reservoir have been scoring on catfish taking worms and prepared baits.

SAND HILLS — Sandhill cranes have been moving through lately, and some ducks have been arriving on sandhills lakes. Teal, wigeon, gadwall, and a very few mallards are in the area, but no diving ducks have shown up yet.

NORTHEAST — Fishermen below Gavins Point Dam have been taking some limits of walleye and sauger to 4 pounds and some white bass to 1 pound, all on minnows and artificals. The Elkhorn River in Stanton County is giving up 3½ pound catfish on frogs, and Dead Timber State Recreation Area is producing occasional largemouth bass on spinnerbaits. East Verdigre Creek above Grove Lake is producing 10 to 12-inch trout, and the Missouri River near Niobrara is giving up 2-pound walleye on minnows.

Several species of puddle ducks have been moving in in good numbers, along with a few small Canada geese and some whitefronts. Snow goose hunting has been slow.

Nebraska women's teams busy

The Nebraska varsity and junior varsity volleyball teams will be in action this weekend when NU hosts the Husker Invitational Friday and Saturday at the NU Colieum. The cross country team will be in action Saturday.

Teams joining the Huskers in the volleyball tourney include Oklahoma State, St. Cloud State, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska-Omaha and the Lincoln Volleyball Club.

Pool play begins Friday at 5 p.m. with a single-elimination and consolation tournament slated to start at 9 a.m. Saturday. The NU varsity, now 12-4, UNO, St. Cloud State and Oklahoma State will be in Pool A while the NU junior varisty, Lincoln Volleyball Club, Minnesota and Missouri will compete in Pool B. Anyone with a Nebraska football ticket will be admitted Saturday morning at a reduced ticket price.

The junior varsity, now 11-0, will host Platte College and Nebraska Wesleyan at the NU Coliseum Wednesday, Oct. 19 at 6 p.m. The JV team has defeated both teams earlier this year.

Carol Frost's cross county team will host Wyoming, Kearney and UNO and runners from Ft. Hays State and Doane Saturday morning at 10 at Pioneer Golf Course.

The Huskers, who won their last meet at South Dakota State, will be without the services of Kelly Hiatt who injured her knee.

Leading the Nebraska team will be Cindy Dixon, who has won all three of the meets the Huskers have competed in.

Lincoln one of 12 sites for x-country

Pius X's George O'Boyle is the director for the Lincoln district Junior Olympic cross country meet Oct. 30.

Competition is open for boys and girls in these five age groups — 9 and under, 10-11, 12-13, 14-15 and 16-17. Distances vary from one mile for 9 and under girls to three miles for the 16-17 age group.

The top eight finishers in each of 12 Nebraska districts qualify for the state finals in Hastings Nov. 6. The top eight there advance to regional competition in Madison, Wis., Nov. 19, with the top eight in that meet moving on to national competition in Washington state Dec. 10.

District meets scheduled Oct. 29 with meet directors in parentheses include: Albion (Jim Clarke), McCook (Rev. Don Nunnally), South Sioux City (Steve Shadle), Beatrice (Jerry Hepp), Kimball (George Haun), Bloomfield (Duane Wilken) and Lexington (Ray Ehlers).

Other Oct. 30 meets are at Hastings (Ike Friend), Fremont (Jon Appleget), Omaha (Dick McMahon) and David City (Father Bob Roh).

Athletes, who will be placed in divisions according to their age as of Jan. 1 of this year, should contact the meet directors for entry forms.

Lincolnites to national event

Columbus, Ohio — Lincolnites Bob and Joyce Loomis have three entries in the All-American Quarter Horse Congress to be held here Oct. 15-24.

The Loomis' will have entries in the barrel racing sweepstakes, the halter colt futurity and the western pleasure futurity. The Congress will make its 11th year with one of the richest purses in quarter horse competition.

Ali: Money, prestige keeps me in ring

Atlanta (UPI) — Muhammad Ali, who has announced his retirement three different times, then changed his mind, said Wednesday night that he is tired of boxing but can't bring himself to quit because of the money and prestige involved.

"Everytime I've said I was retiring, I thought about giving up $10 million a year, $5 million after taxes," said the world's heavyweight champion. "Besides, there are so many other things that I can do as the reigning champ that I wouldn't be able to do if I stepped aside.

"People have short memories," Ali continued. "It wouldn't be long after I retired before there would be new heroes in boxing. Like Rap Brown, Stokley Carmichael, Angela Davis and the Ku Klux Klan, people forget."

The champ is in Atlanta, at his own expense, to put on a Thursday night exhibition bout with Jimmy Ellis, the sparring partner who decked him last month while he was preparing for his title match with Earnie Shavers. Proceeds from the bout go to President Carter's "Friendship Force."

"There's so much I can do with the title," said Ali. "But I've been fighting a battle with myself on whether I should fight again, or with who."

Stocks drop sharply

Dow Ind. —8.40

New York (AP) — The stock market dropped sharply for the second straight session Wednesday in a mood of gloom over rising interest rates.

The selling pushed New York Stock Exchange volume to its highest level in more than 2½ months.

Declines outnumbered advances by a lopsided 5-1 margin in the daily tally of New York Stock Exchange issues.

And the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had fallen .88 points Tuesday to a 22-month low, dropped another 8.40 to 823.98.

The average last closed lower at 821.63 on Dec. 8, 1975.

Analysts said recent hopes that short term interest rates might be ready to level off after their steady rise of late appeared to have faded.

There were widespread forecasts that the Federal Reserve's weekly report on Thursday afternoon would show a big jump in the basic measure of the money supply.

That, in turn, would presumably lead to continued credit-tightening by the Fed, and to further increases in open market money rates and the bank prime lending rate.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials fell .97 on the day to 103.40.

Suit filed in MAT, union dispute

Omaha (AP) — A union representing bus drivers has filed a suit in Douglas County District Court to force Metro Area Transit to collect union dues from wages and remit the dues to the union.

The Transport Workers of America, Local 223, alleged that for some time MAT has deducted $12 per month union dues from drivers' paychecks and remitted the total to the union. But MAT notified the union July 27 that it no longer would collect and remit the dues.

The suit asks the court to force MAT to continue the old wage assignment policy.

MAT's contract with the union expired in July but the union agreed not to strike pending agreement on a new contract.

The matter is before the State Court of Industrial Relations. Disputes center on fringe benefits.

Suit asks arbitration

Omaha (AP) — A lawsuit to force KETV Television Inc. to arbitrate the dismissal of a reporter has been filed in U.S. District Court in Omaha by the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists.

The suit filed Tuesday asks the court to force the station to honor its collective bargaining agreement, which became effective last March.

The suit alleged that reporter Larry Miller was dismissed on Aug. 5 and that since Sept. 26, KETV management has refused to arbitrate the dispute.

The suit said the collective bargaining agreement has procedures for arbitration in such cases, but the station allegedly has not followed those procedures.

Blair resigns state bar post

Robert C. Blair, 40, counsel on professional discipline for the Nebraska State Bar Association, is resigning his post to become a pilot with a Defense Department contractor.

Blair, who earned $31,500 annually as the bar's disciplinary supervisor, said he would become chief aircraft and helicopter pilot for Global Associates, which provides civilian support services on Kwajalein Island in the South Pacific.

Blair recommended that Stan Gushard, Real Estate Commission attorney, be named to replace him at least temporarily.

Market Place group agrees to join DAC

The Market Place Restoration Association, formed this summer by private businessmen, agreed Wednesday to attach itself to the Downtown Advisory Committee (DAC).

The group agreed to the move after DAC President Robert Magee told members they would have more leverage as a task force of DAC than a private group.

Magee pointed to the accomplishments of other DAC task forces in beautification projects for 13th St., O St., J St. and Que Place.

Former DAC President Dick White, who is active in the Market Place group, also suggested that it drop its dues in favor of joining the Lincoln Center Association.

Soybean, corn futures down

Chicago (AP) — Clear skies in the Midwest and worries about a longshoremen's strike at New Orleans trimmed soybean and corn futures prices Wednesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

The good harvesting weather resulted in some additional hedge selling just before the final bell, depressing soybean futures about 12 cents a bushel. Soybean oil averaged losses of 65 points, but meal was just moderately lower.

Commission house liquidation dominated action in the wheat pit, where prices dropped more than three cents.

Letters protest phone rate hike plan

By Lynn Zerschling
Star Staff Writer

About 20 letters have been filed with the Nebraska Public Service Commission protesting Northwestern Bell's application for a rate increase.

The protests have been filed by businesses, several municipalities and citizens living in the Northwestern Bell service area in eastern Nebraska. The company serves 130 communities.

The telephone company is asking for $18.5 million in additional revenues, an increase, which if granted, would boost overall phone bills by 10.4%. Bell officials have not outlined specific increases which would affect residential, business or other service costs.

The PSC, which regulates telephone companies in the state, probably won't hold hearings on the rate request until January.

The commission just completed hearing a week of testimony concerning Lincoln Telephone & Telegraph Co.'s request for $6 million more in revenues. Hearings on several other telephone company requests, including one from Blair, will be held before the Northwestern Bell rate hearing.

Wells Fargo Alarm Services and Security International, Inc., claimed in separate protests that higher telephone rates will force them to hike their charges to their customers. As a result, they will have to charge higher rates than competing alarm services not in the Northwestern Bell service area.

The higher rates were called "unreasonable and inflationary," by Security International, and would result in rates which would discourage "much of the life saving signal transmissions now being made and which will be needed in the future."

American District Telegraph Co. and Energy Management & Control Co., both in Omaha, also objected to the proposed rate hike.

Mayor Pat Risor of Wisner and the Wisner City Council wrote, "A telephone has become an essential to almost all our citizens. Those on fixed incomes realize that some increase in such rates is justified." However, Risor wrote, he and the lawmakers object to such a big increase.

The South Sioux City Council and City Administrator Wallace Stovall asserted that utilities are failing to operate "in a manner to hold costs, wages and prices to reasonable levels.

The City of Crete also claimed the rates requested by Northwestern Bell are unjustified.

Protests also were filed by Bell customers living in North Platte, Laurel, Ansley, Minden, Loup City and Omaha.

One protestor, Mrs. Rosanda Schroll of Ravenna added a postscript to her letter which said, "Our service is terrible." She didn't give any details.

In the application filed with the PSC, Bell Vice President Ben Morris said the company is asking for a 10.75% rate of return on investment. The PSC now authorizes a 9% rate. Due to spiraling costs, that rate of return will drop to 7.6% by the end of 1977, Morris asserted.

Factors contributing to the decline in Northwestern Bell's rate of return include higher wage costs, a more ambitious construction program and an accelerated rural service improvement program, Morris said.

Morris noted that Bell will spend $68 million this year on its construction program compared to $51.4 million during 1976.

In April, 1976, the commission granted Bell a $4.6 million increase in revenues. The company asked for $7 million annually. In 1975, Northwestern Bell asked for a $16 million increase in revenues yearly. The PSC granted $5.3 million.

Man released on $3,500 bond after shooting Omaha woman

Omaha (UPI) — An Omahan who mistakenly shot a woman he thought was his common-law wife of nine years has been released on $3,500 bond on a charge of assault with intent to kill, wound or maim.

Henry C. Avant, 34, is accused of shooting Clara M. Hunter, 30, Omaha, as she was sitting in her car after she left work Friday. Avant was charged Monday and released on bond Tuesday following a municipal court hearing.

Mrs. Hunter, who was shot in the shoulder, told police a man drove his car up next to her's and said, "I'm going to kill you."

Police said a shot from a .38-caliber pistol struck Mrs. Hunter in the left shoulder. She also was cut by flying glass from her car window.

After Mrs. Hunter yelled at the man that he had mistaken her for someone else, police said the man replied, "I thought you were my wife."

Investigators said the man then advised Mrs. Hunter to "call the police. I know I'm going to jail."

Casey is Louis

Hollywood (UPI) — Bernie Casey will portray former heavyweight champion Joe Louis in "Rehearsal for Armageddon," a 20th Century-Fox two-hour NBC-TV special based on Louis' two historic fights with Germany's Max Schmeling.

Frontier offers direct routes from local cities to Chicago

A spokesman for Frontier Airlines of Denver Wednesday said seven cities in Nebraska, Kansas and South Dakota will be offered jet service to Chicago's O'Hare International Airport beginning Nov. 7.

Bob Schulman said Frontier will offer two daily round-trip flights from Chicago to Lincoln and Topeka and Salina, Kan. The new service will mark the first time Frontier has offered the two Kansas cities direct service to O'Hare, he said.

New State Criminal Code to be studied

Parts of the new State Criminal Code need reworking or rewording, according to reports delivered to the Nebraska County Judges Association.

Groups have been set up to study parts of the criminal code and inform the Legislature's Judiciary Committee of any problems. The groups are made up of a district judge, a county judge, a county attorney and a public defender.

Buffalo County Judge John Icenogle said changes in drug statutes mean that a few more crimes can be committed because more laws are included in the code, "but I'm not sure they can be prosecuted."

Icenogle pointed out one section that makes it illegal for a person to induce another to take or consume any of a number of substances to produce intoxication, giddiness or depression. Among the forbidden substances was alcohol, the judge noted.

"Folks, we have Prohibition again," Icenogle quipped. The statute was broad enough to cover a friendly gathering in a person's home, he said.

Keith County Judge Richard Myers said burglary statutes were too broad in defining who could be arrested for possession of burglary tools.

"If I have a screwdriver and know somebody is going to use it to break in, I can be guilty," Myers said.

Custer County Judge C. S. Marchek pointed out that under the law, brass knuckles and knives were technically firearms.

Other judges reported problems with child neglect, gambling and abortion sections of the law.

The reports of the study groups are to be forwarded to the Attorney General's office and Sen. Wally Barnett, Lincoln, chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

Although the criminal code passed last session by the Legislature over the veto of Gov. J. James Exon, the code does not take effect until next year, after the Unicameral has had an opportunity to review the laws and make necessary changes.

Attorney ad proposals to be decided by court

The question of whether or not Nebraska's attorneys can advertise their services will be left up to the state Supreme Court, the Nebraska Bar Association's House of Delegates decided Wednesday.

The delegates voted to send two plans on lawyer advertisement to the high court with a recommendation that the court adopt the plan that details what an attorney may put in an ad.

That system, known as Plan A, would allow lawyers to advertise their name, firm, what field of law they practice, some information about fees and other personal data.

That plan contains nearly seven pages of instructions and restrictions on how and what lawyers may advertise in newspapers and on radio.

The other system, known as Plan B, would not specify what a lawyer may advertise, but instead puts the restriction that the ad contain nothing false, misleading or unethical, said Kile Johnson, chairman of the study committee.

Data-processing card presented

Washington (AP) — George Abbot of Omaha, Neb., presented to the Smithsonian Wednesday his certificate of data processing, the first to be issued when the data-processing qualification test was first offered in 1962.

Accepting the certificate was Uta O. Merzbach, curator of the division of mathematics at the Smithsonian's Museum of History and Technology.

Warrants expected in shooting

Omaha (AP) — Authorities expect to issue several warrants soon in the death of retired Council Bluffs, Iowa, police captain John Schweers, officials said Wednesday.

Schweers, whose body was found on the south edge of Council Bluffs in July, had been working as a night security guard for several auto dealers when he was killed.

E. Holdrege folks tell of poor road conditions

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

About 35 residents from the E. Holdrege St. area between 84th and 148th St. appeared at a public meeting Wednesday to tell County Engineer Marv Nuernberger about problems with their road.

The section of gravel road is so heavily traveled it is impossible to keep it in repair, residents said. It has deep ruts, is narrow and is too poorly graded for safety, some testified.

Nuernberger indicated his department is in the process of acquiring right-of-way for eventually upgrading the road and possibly paving it.

Paving will occur only if some excess federal funds become available when the road is ready to be paved. A section of Havelock Ave. also between 84th and 148th St. is also on "standby" status for paving, Nuernberger said.

In all, about 85 people turned out for the public information meeting on Nuernberger's one-year and six-year road plans.

Nuernberger said few new road projects can be added to those already in planning because of "increasing costs of material and labor and a continuing reduction by the County Board in the mill levy for roads and bridges."

While the $2.2 million bridge and special road fund is up about $100,000 from last year, Nuernberger argued that the number of mills of property tax coming into his office has declined.

A mill breaks down to $1 for every $1,000 of assessed valuation on all property in the county. Because the value of property has increased, each mill brings in more money this year than it did last year or the year before. A mill currently equals $685,000.

Nuernberger pointed out that in 1974-75, the bridge and road fund received 3.037 mills, out of a total county levy of 10.68 mills. This year the total levy is 14.181 mills, but the road fund has been reduced to 2.257 mills, even though the total dollars in the fund have increased.

The board is taking money away from road projects and directing it into other programs, Nuernberger said. He added he finds the situation "frustrating" but that he intends to "whip" it.

By using local funds for planning, engineering and right-of-way acquisition, Nuernberger said he has been able to bring $4 million in state and federal aid into the county in two years for road and bridge construction.

He contends the local money has to keep coming, in order to keep the federal dollars flowing in. Because Lancaster County is prepared, it is able to use aid money turned back in by other counties which were unable to spend it, he said.

Persons at the meeting noted several areas where they would like to see road work completed, but generally had few complaints about the road plans.

One resident of the Clarendon Hills subdivision southeast of Lincoln complained about lack of maintenance of roads there. Nuernberger explained that the subdivision had not yet met minimum standards for county maintenance.

A public hearing before the County Board on the road plans will be Tuesday, Nov. 1 at 1:30 p.m. in the County-City Building.

Their income will take a leap upward

John Pusztai, a $200-a-week maintenance worker, says he will quit his job after winning New Jersey Lottery's $1,000 a week for life Wednesday. His wife, Lizabeth, broke into tears. Pusztai said he is a former Hungarian freedom fighter, but he would not elaborate.

Right-turn code uniformity urged

Washington (UPI) — The Transportation Department Wednesday announced a national standard for right turns at red traffic lights and urged local authorities to put it into effect wherever possible to save energy and improve traffic flow.

A department spokesman noted that 48 states and Puerto Rico have adopted right-turn-on-red legislation, although the laws will not take effect in Maine and Maryland until mid-1978.

The department said the exceptions are Connecticut and Massachusetts, where right turns at red lights are legal only when authorized by signs, and the District of Columbia, which bars right turns at all red signals. It said New York state allows such turns, although they are banned in New York City.

The new standards, issued as guidelines, rather than mandatory rules, replace a less flexible set of standards published last year. The new guidelines would allow right turns on red except where engineering studies showed:

— Inadequate ability to see vehicles approaching from the left.

— An intersection design that might result in unexpected conflicts.

— A special pedestrian crossing phase in the traffic signal system.

— Significant pedestrian conflicts would result from a right-turn-on-red policy.

— More than three right-turn-on-red accidents in a single year occurred at a specific intersection.

— Significant crossing activity by children, the elderly or the handicapped.

The department said the same rules should be applied to left turns at red signals for one-way streets, except that the view of approaching traffic should be adequate to the right.

If turns on red are ruled out for a specific intersection because any of the six hazards are found, the spokesman said, signs reading "No Turn on Red" should be posted.

Claim to world record disputed

Hamburg, West Germany (AP) — The Maerklin model train company Wednesday disputed the world record claimed by Henry Bodenstedt of Farmingdale, N.J., for continuous running of his model train.

Bodenstedt announced Monday his Maerklic-made train had surpassed the 273.85-mile record by an Englishman that is listed in the Guinness Book of World Records.

But the company said Dieter Volger, a West German, had run a Maerklin train for 720 kilometers (447.39 miles) nonstop last month.

Hastings homecoming hosts bands

Hastings — Hastings College is bracing itself for the onslaught of 3,000 young musicians in 49 bands who will participate in the 28th annual Melody Roundup in conjunction with homecoming festivities Saturday.

According to Duane E. Johnson, associate professor of music at the college, the day's activities begin with a 9:30 a.m. parade through downtown Hastings led by the college band. All 49 visiting bands, the homecoming queen and her court, floats, and assorted antique cars and other vehicles will follow. Bands will be judged during the parade with awards to be presented at halftime of the afternoon football game.

Singer-guitarist-athlete Tom Chapin and the three-member comedy team The Graduates will perform Saturday night in concert on the college campus.

Concordia features Ferguson

Seward — Students at Concordia College are preparing for two days of homecoming activities which begin Saturday with a parade and end Sunday night with a concert by noted musician Maynard Ferguson.

Saturday's parade is followed by a cross country match with Wayne, a soccer match with Avila and football with Dana College. King Dave Mueller, a senior from Appleton, Wis. and queen Sandy Young, a senior from Fort Wayne, Ind., will reign over festivities. They were crowned earlier this week.

Sunday starts with a special Eucharist service at St. John Lutheran Church. Ferguson, whose musical fame skyrocketed with his performance of the theme music for the Oscar-winning movie "Rocky," and theme music for the TV series "Star Trek," will present a concert Sunday night in the physical education building on campus.

Astrological Forecast

By Sidney Omarr

Thursday, October 13, 1977

Sylvester Stallone, born under Cancer, knowledgeable about astrology — his mother interprets his horoscope and says, "Sylvester loves astrology!" The brilliant actor-author smashed to film stardom with his "Rocky." More success is upcoming — and it is good to have friends of astrology in high places.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Examine various projects, opportunities. Social life increases — you make additional contacts. Emphasis on financial status of partner, mate. Stick to number "3." Deal with Gemini, Sagittarius persons. What had been hidden or lost will be located.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Lie low—check legal rights, permissions. Accent on public relations, confronting diverse views — and marital status. Be thorough. Time is on your side. Be aware of fine print; read between the lines. Aquarian may be trying to tell you something.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Study Taurus message — be analytical, take nothing for granted. Don't be satisfied to know merely that something happened — find out "why." Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. Stick with number "5." Yes, the change works for you, despite initial conflict.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good lunar aspect coincides now with variety, creativity, affair of heart. Emotions tend to flood logic. Key is to strive for balance. Yes, the domestic adjustment was necessary — and so was the purchase. Taurus, Libra and Scorpio persons are part of scenario.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your illusions, dreams, creative efforts find fertile ground. Pisces, Virgo figure prominently. Emphasis on building, nailing down agreement, getting credit where due. The number "7" might play unusual role. Public acclaim might come as result of recent statement, declaration or article.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Ideas can be transformed into something solid, a viable concept that results in satisfaction, profit. Capricorn, Cancer figure in picture. Accent on trips, mail, telephone messages which should not be ignored. Fresh concept, contact proves beneficial. Stick to number "1".

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Obtain hint from Virgo message. You'll get financial support for expansion. Think ahead, plan to enlarge, to raise horizons, to do what is necessary to make a dream a reality. Aries, Libra persons figure prominently — and so does the number "9".

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Lunar position accents initiative, independence, personality, gains through making personal appearances. Creative endeavors succeed — your own style is imprinted. Members of opposite sex find you a fascinating challenge — and some don't hesitate to say so.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Trust intuition. Adhere to credo of "Learn by teaching." Aquarian figures prominently. Accent on backstage, behind scenes, institutions, television, hospitals. Do not eat and run. Be "kind" to your digestion.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emphasis on friendly atmosphere, encouragement. Social life accelerates. You meet people — you make contacts which are exciting, challenging and romantic. Gemini, Sagittarius figure in scenario. Long-distance call might be significant.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are off the sidelines and into the game. Spotlight on additional funds, career, confidence, better relationship with "the boss." Yes, it is time to review, revise, remodel — you may have to dismantle some areas in order to guarantee a more solid structure.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent on getting thoughts on paper, communicating, making necessary changes. Gemini, Virgo and Sagittarius persons could be in picture. You distribute, display, publish — you perceive potential and now you do something about it.

IF OCTOBER 13 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you had a mind of your own at a very early age. You broke rules, could have been separated physically or in psychological sense from one or both parents. You did not fit into any mold. Aquarius, Scorpio and Leo persons could play key roles in your life. June was one of your most important months of 1977, a year which feature ties, strong relationship, commitments. You travel in December, a month featuring exciting and challenging changes.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
